House approves gas tax increase

By MARY BETH FRANKLIN
United Press International

WASHINGTON — The House approved President Reagan's nickel-a-gallon gasoline tax hike early today.

Shortly after that, the House gave final approval to the administration's highway bill, sending the measure to the Senate.

The House voted 236-169 for the increase in gasoline and diesel fuel taxes to 9 cents a gallon shortly after midnight, ending more than nine hours of debate that at times left the outcome in doubt.

It then voted 262-143 for the overall highway authorization bill, sending it to the Senate, which is expected to consider its own version Thursday.

The prolonged debate on the measure had House leaders of both parties worried.

Aides to House Speaker Thomas O'Neill, D-Mass., and House GOP leader Robert Michel of Illinois had predicted a much narrower margin.

Reagan wants Congress to complete action on the gas tax increase during the lame-duck session, which is slated to end next week.

As the debate dragged on, congressional sources began to worry whether the measure would be passed.

The first hint of trouble came early in the evening when a normally noncontroversial vote on the parliamentary rule governing the debate survived by a narrow 197-194 vote.

The 5-cent increase in gasoline and diesel fuel taxes would take effect April 1, 1983, and is expected to raise about $5.5 billion a year through 1988. The money will be used to repair the nation's roads, bridges and mass transit systems.

The administration says the bill will create about 320,000 jobs, a small dent in the 10.8 percent unemployment rate which translates into 12 million jobless Americans.

While it would cost the average motorist an additional $30 a year in gasoline bills, it would substantially boost highway use and excise taxes paid by heavy trucks.

The House also defeated an amendment that would have limited high-paying "prevailing wage" jobs, as defined by the Davis Bacon Act, to new construction, thereby expanding the existing high paying jobs provision to repairs and road resurfacing.

The gas tax increase is part of a $70.8 billion highway and mass transit authorization bill.

Rep. Bud Shuster, R-Pa., just back in the House after suffering neck injuries in a car accident, appealed to his colleagues for quick passage of the highway bill.

With a thick neck brace restricting his movements, Shuster said, "We must act or we must pay a price much deeper that the price of the tax. We're talking about saving lives, because modernized highways mean safer highways."

The bill also would alter a variety of sales and highway use taxes, shifting the burden of highway maintenance toward heavy trucks, which the administration believes are responsible for most of the damage to the nation's highways.

The powerful trucking lobby opposes the tax portion of the bill that would boost their federal tax payments by more than 150 percent.

The House approved a minimum payment amendment, offered by Public Works Committee Chairman James Howard, D-N.J., that would assure states a minimum return on their highway tax dollars. The amendment was worked out by Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis and his staff during the weekend to gather extra votes for the gas tax bill.

It would assure every state of receiving at least 85 cents in federal highway funds for every $1 it contributes to the highway trust fund.

Without the amendment, seven states — Texas, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Ohio, Oklahoma and Wisconsin — would have received no more than 80 cents per dollar back in federal highway grants.

The compromise also was expected to improve the bill's chances in the Senate, where Sens. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, and Robert Kasten, R-Wis., raised similar concerns. The Senate Commerce Committee approved the trucking portion of the bill Monday, without objection.

Texas executes killer with lethal injection

By BRUCE NICHOLS
United Press International

HUNTSVILLE, Texas — Convicted killer Charlie Brooks was executed early today, the nation's first prisoner to die by injection.

He was also the first black put to death since capital punishment was resumed in 1977.

Brooks, 40, convicted of killing an auto mechanic during the theft of a used car in 1976, was strapped to a hospital cart and wheeled into the execution chamber that once housed the state's electric chair. He was pronounced dead at 12:16 a.m. CST.

An executioner working out of sight of witnesses fed the lethal dose of three drugs into a tube connected to Brooks' arm. The mixture took effect in seconds, halting Brooks's breathing and stilling his heart.

Four news reporters witnessed the execution.

A chaplain and relative who visited Brooks in the final hours before his execution said he was "relatively calm" and "prepared" to die. As he waited, while his final seven appeals were rejected Monday, Brooks dined on a last meal of steak, French fries, peach cobbler and iced tea.

Brooks was the sixth person put to death in the United States since executions were resumed with the death of Gary Gilmore before a Utah firing squad in 1977.

Brooks' final appeal was rejected at 11:55 p.m., 10 minutes before the time scheduled for the execution.

The U.S. Supreme Court, the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans, Gov. William Clements, the Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles, the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals and a U.S. district judge all rejected requests for a reprieve Monday, the 5th circuit ruling twice.

CHARLIE BROOKS
Calm before execution

Shortly before 10 p.m., lawyers for Brooks asked U.S. District Judge David Belew in Fort Worth to halt the execution, but he turned them down. The attorneys then attempted to appeal Belew's decision to the 5th circuit but were again turned down.

"It's fair to say this is pretty much the end of the road," said Hugh Lowe, an attorney who filed a last-minute appeal in Austin with the criminal appeals court.

The Supreme Court voted 6-3 against a delay and the Texas criminal appeals panel rejected Brooks' plea 9-0, clearing the way for him to become the first person executed in Texas in 18 years.

Under carefully prescribed rules, Brooks was moved early Monday 16 miles from death row near Trinity to the Huntsville Prison unit to start the procedure that would climax with his execution.

Brooks spent the day visiting with the prison's Islamic chaplain, Akbar Shabazz, Islamic chaplain Larry Sharrieff of Fort Worth and Brooks' niece, Berry Mitchell of Fort Worth, who sat outside his cell, prison officials said.

"He's very high spirited," Mitchell said when she left the prison at 6 p.m. as visiting hours ended. "He said he's prepared."

Sharrieff described Brooks at "relatively calm."

Brooks had said he did not want to die although as a recently converted Moslem he believes in capital punishment.

Prison officials said Brooks ate steak, French fries, peach cobbler and iced tea for his last meal.

Authorities said Brooks would shower, be dressed in a hospital gown and taken back to his cell for the final hours before being strapped to a hospital gurney — a hospital bed on wheels — and taken to the death chamber.

Texas Poison Control Center Director Michael Ellis said death should be quick. He said one of the drugs, sodium thiopental, is a barbiturate used commonly to anesthetize medical patients, but the condemned inmate gets a massive overdose that stops breathing.

The other drugs used are pavulon, a muscle relaxer, and potassium chloride, which stops the heart.

Rivers in St. Louis area chase 25,000 from homes

By CHARLES J. ABBOTT
United Press International

Floods chewed through sandbag dikes at St. Louis and battered homes in the Mississippi River Valley Monday.

Mass evacuations turned neighborhoods into ghost towns bedeviled with rampaging water.

Flooding damaged at least 13,000 homes in Missouri, where nearly 25,000 people were forced to flee rising floodwaters. Illinois, Arkansas and Mississippi also battled high water.

Cold Arctic winds that whistled into Minnesota, North Dakota and Montana, pushed south — threatening to put a skin of ice on flooded areas. A three-day heat wave continued in the East. Philadelphia and New York peaked at a record 68.

The muggy heat in New York City disrupted trading at the Commodity Exchange, the nation's largest precious metals exchange. A spokesman said all Comex markets were closed for about 30 minutes at noon "because of extreme heat on the trading floor." Trading in silver and gold was halted one hour early because of air conditioning problems.

Employees at a number of Manhattan office buildings said they were sweltering at their work places.

Light rain and mild temperatures continued along the eastern seaboard. More seasonable temperatures were expected as cooler air spilled over the Appalachians.

Snow in Washington, Idaho and southern Montana caused hazardous driving conditions in the mountains. Snow also fell in North Dakota and northern Minnesota.

Dense fog hung over parts of central and southern California and the San Francisco Bay area was stuck in drizzle.

Nearly 18,000 people deserted St. Louis suburbs, where the Meramec River spilled over its banks. Police stood by to prevent looting. Some residents refused to leave.

People trapped in their homes draped sheets out windows as signals to helicopter pilots. Rescuers criss-crossed the area in high-powered boats.

A woman in one Missouri flood area described the event as a "science fiction thing."

At Arnold, Mo., the Meramec breached levees and authorities told about 2,000 people to evacuate. The surging river washed away two days of work by hundreds of volunteers who had attempted strengthen the levees.

The Meramec was expected to crest late Monday at a record 43 or 44 feet, as much as 20 feet above flood stage. The river was forecast to exceed flood levels set in 1915 at several spots.

Fifteen counties were declared disaster areas.

In Union, Mo., the swollen Bourbeuse River dropped Monday, leaving behind mud and debris.

Alvera Peters of Union said the flood was like a "science fiction thing."

"I live on a bluff overlooking the Bourbeuse," she said. "All you could hear was the roar."

In Illinois, volunteers and state disaster agency workers laid sandbags to reinforce levees in Peoria, but Gov. James R. Thompson held off declaring the state a disaster area.

Illinois Emergency Services and Disaster Agency spokesman Chuck Jones said officials will wait until the Illinois River crests Tuesday and Wednesday before making declaration.

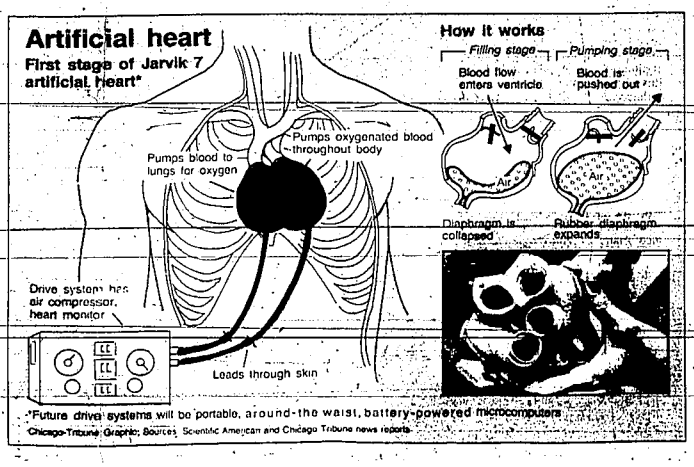
Artificial heart recipient gaining strength



By RALPH WAKLEY
United Press International

SALT LAKE CITY — Artificial heart recipient Barney Clark did more leg exercises on the edge of his bed Monday and doctors removed drainage tubes from his chest, saying small leaks in his lungs had sealed themselves.

Clark, 61, a retired dentist from suburban Seattle, remained in serious but stable condition at the University of Utah Medical Center four days after surgeons implanted a plastic pump in his chest to replace his diseased heart.

He is the first human to receive a permanent artificial heart and has survived longer on the device than patients who have relied on machines to do the work of hearts temporarily.

Dr. Chase Peterson, university vice president for health science, told a news briefing Clark was doing so well with an exercise program designed to build his strength that doctors may give him longer workouts in the next day or two.

"The chest tube has also been taken out," Peterson said, "which is further evidence that the leaks in his lungs have sealed themselves."

Clark was rushed back into surgery Saturday for repair of small tears in his lungs which had been leaking bubbles of air into chest tissue. The bubbles began to swell the chest after the drainage tubes inserted during the original surgery were removed.

Doctors stapled several of the tears, but others were so small they were left to heal themselves.

Four times a day, nurses have had Clark sit on the edge of the bed and swing his legs back and forth for five minutes. "Within the next 24 to 48 hours we hope to increase that," said Peterson.

Their goal is to restore the 6-foot-4 Clark, an avid golfer before degenerative heart disease forced him into bed in recent months, to a "general feeling of robustness."

Clark was put on an exercise regimen Sunday and doctors said they hoped to have him standing up and possibly taking a few steps in the next day or two.

"I'd really like to stand up and stretch, but I just don't think I can make it yet," Clark told doctors after his first workout.

"It was an effort for him, but we want to begin to rebuild his strength," said Dr. Lyle Joyce, one of the surgeons who implanted the artificial heart. "He tolerated it well."

Jane Stelich, one of the nurses caring for Clark in a specially prepared treatment room, said the dentist had gone out of his way to be a cooperative patient. "He is totally unique," she said.

She said the nursing staff was attempting to restructure therapy and other routine nursing duties so Clark could get more sleep. "For the first few days, he never got more than a couple hours of sleep at a time."

While the artificial heart team was happy with the experimental patient's recovery so far, they remained cautious about his long-range outlook. Infection is their top concern, although they reported no signs of it.

The early success of the Jarvik-7, a two-chambered polyurethane pump driven by compressed air from a 375-pound console tethered to Clark by two hoses, prompted university officials to warn that additional artificial hearts will not be implanted soon.

Gemayel wants U.S. troops

By United Press International

Lebanese President Amin Gemayel renewed a call Monday for more U.S. peace-keeping troops as fierce battles erupted between Druze Moslems and Christians in the Shouf Mountains southeast of Beirut.

Six months to the day after Israeli invasion forces rumbled into Lebanon, Gemayel asked U.S. peace envoy Morris Draper for more American Marines to add to the 4,500-member peace-keeping force, Lebanese officials said.

Government sources said Gemayel also asked for President Reagan's help in getting various European nations to contribute troops to the force, made up of American, French and Italian soldiers. Of the total, 1,300 are U.S. Marines.

Decision on TMI postponed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission said Monday it is postponing indefinitely a decision whether to allow restarting of the undamaged Three Mile Island Unit 1 reactor.

The NRC announced the delay after the commissioners met privately to debate the proposed restart of the nuclear power plant.

"They don't plan to vote on Friday on lifting the effectiveness of those two orders that prevent TMI-1 from starting up," NRC spokesman Bob Newlin said.

U.S. improves Pakistan ties

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State George Shultz welcomed Pakistani President Mohammad Zia ul-Haq on his first state visit Monday, and the two promptly sat down to review often-troubled ties between the countries.

After lunch, Zia said he and Shultz had signed a joint administrative document that "institutionalizes arrangements" for economic and cultural ties between the two nations.

Soviets issue MX warning

MOSCOW (UPI) — Defense Minister Dmitry Ustinov warned Monday the Soviet Union will build its own MX missile if the Reagan administration "challenges us with the development of the MX" in alleged violation of the SALT treaties.

In a lengthy interview with the official Tass news agency, Ustinov made the most far-reaching statement of Soviet military policy since President Leonid Brezhnev died Nov. 10. His comments indicated the new regime of Communist Party General Secretary Yuri Andropov will follow the Brezhnev line.

Rebels kidnap soccer teams

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) — Leftist rebels kidnapped two soccer teams and about 150 spectators from a rural stadium, forcing them to march through the night to a mountain guerrilla camp, witnesses said Monday.

Carmen de Soriano, a municipal worker in the eastern town of San Sebastian, said in a telephone interview about 150 rebels dressed in olive green uniforms killed several of the spectators who tried to escape from the stadium Sunday.

She said relatives reported the members of two soccer teams, each with 11 men, and 120 other spectators were taken away by the guerrillas. She estimated that another 40 people were missing, but their relatives were afraid to seek help from authorities.

Pope plans Austrian visit

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Pope John Paul II plans to visit Austria and Venezuela next year and Switzerland in 1984, it was announced Monday.

The pope announced his trip to Austria in a speech to about 100 Austrian parliamentarians and their families at the Vatican. He did not give any dates for his visit to Austria but church sources have said the trip is expected to take place next September.

In Caracas, the presidential press office announced John Paul will visit Venezuela in April or May of next year — after the Latin American episcopal conference in Haiti.

Bomb wrecks pub in Ulster

LONDONDERRY, Northern Ireland (UPI) — A bomb ripped apart a pub frequented by off-duty British soldiers Monday night, killing at least six people and injuring 40 disco dancers crushed by the collapsed concrete roof, police said.

More than three hours after the 4:13 p.m MST blast in nearby Ballykelly, at least three people remained trapped beneath the roof that weighed several hundred tons, a police spokesman said.

Singer Robbins clings to life

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Grand Ole Opry star Marty Robbins clung to life Monday with the aid of a balloon device that kept his damaged heart pumping.

Robbins, who has recorded 18 No. 1 country hits in a career spanning three decades, was reported in "extremely critical" condition following his third heart attack and second coronary bypass operation.

Wives' strike may be over

SMITHFIELD, R.I. (UPI) — Confusion reigned Monday, among neighborhood housewives who went on strike last week for more husbandly appreciation and recognition.

Several said the walkout was over. Others — said they were so overwhelmed by publicity and continually ringing telephones they hadn't had time to either press their husbands for concessions or discuss the strike among themselves.

"It's over," spokeswoman Gloria Gangi said through the closed door of her Oak Street home late Monday morning.

Three hours later, fellow strike organizer Brenda Larkin, 20, described the situation as a "stalemate."

"Things are pretty confusing right now," she said. "We never expected this much attention. The attention has been a problem, the same with the phones ringing off the hook.

"We're at a stalemate. If we don't get any action out of them we'll be out there again," Mrs. Larkin said.

Mrs. Gangi earlier had said the number of striking wives had dropped from 15 to 3 as husbands agreed to demands to help more with the housework, the children and to be more attentive to them.

Striker Terry Waterman said she and her husband reached agreement.

"The first thing he said to me this morning was 'Gee, you look nice today.' He's being so nice to me, I don't know how to handle it."

Mrs. Gangi kept her telephone off the hook after fielding hundreds of calls over the weekend from across the United States and as far away as West Germany, Australia and London.

She said she just wants to be left alone with her husband, Jim, and "resolve this thing."

While most phone callers were supportive, Mrs. Gangi said two men called from Arizona and Arkansas blasting her for giving their wives "bad ideas."

Hyatt cases near windup

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — A judge Monday tentatively approved a combined settlement of all civil damage suits filed in state court as a result of the Hyatt Regency Hotel skywalk disaster, which left 114 people dead.

Jackson County Circuit Judge Timothy O'Leary approved the combined settlement requested by plaintiffs and defendants in the case.

Two skywalks collapsed during a crowded tea dance at hotel in July of last year, killing 114 people and injuring more than 200 others.

The Plaintiffs Liaison Committee and a representative of Hallmark and Crown Center Redevelopment Corp. made the announcement at a news conference.

The settlement includes a $20 million fund for punitive damages and aggravating circumstanes in death cases. The settlement has been agreed to by representatives of plaintiffs with cases in state court and the defendants.

Snow showers, cold, windy today

Twin Falls, Jerome-Gooding, Burley-Rupert areas:

Widely scattered snow showers with locally gusty winds today. Colder with patches of morning fog. Highs in the middle 30s. Partly sunny but cold Wednesday. Highs 30 to 35. Lows 25 to 30.

Camas Prairie, Hailey, Wood River valley:

Scattered snow showers early today becoming partly sunny with areas of late night and early morning fog by Wednesday. Locally strong, gusty winds today. Highs in the middle 30s both days. Lows 5 to 15.

Northern Nevada and Utah:

Nevada will be turning colder with scattered snow showers today, decreasing tonight. Utah indicates scattered snow in the northern mountains, but dry in the valleys.

Synopsis:

Hazardous driving conditions are likely over much of Idaho early today in the wake of a surface cold front moving eastward across the state Monday.

Moist, unstable air followed the front, bringing showers of rain and snow with the latter as low as 4,000 feet. Snow fell over mountain areas Monday evening and during the night.

Except for the Magic Valley during the middle of the day and portions of eastern Idaho, skies were cloudy. Precipitation was light but 24-hour totals ranged to near half an inch. Some reports included Boise .42 inch, Burley .26, Idaho Falls .21, Malad .23, Lewiston .20 and Twin Falls .30.

Monday afternoon temperatures were generally in the 30s and 40s with the warmest reading 52 degrees at Hagerman. The morning low was 7 at Fairfield. Wind velocities were from 15 to 25 mph Monday, with a gust at Pocatello hitting 37 mph.

The extended forecast calls for dry Thursday through Saturday with areas of valley fog and low clouds. Temperatures will moderate during the period, with highs of 25 to 35 Thursday rising into the 30s to low 40s by Saturday. Lows will be from zero through the teens Thursday, rising to 15 to 25 by Saturday.

Elsewhere in the nation Monday, the warmest temperature reported was 87 degrees at Lakeland, Fla., and the coldest was 1 degree at Williston, N.D.

Reagan spearheads massive effort to win MX approval

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan Monday spearheaded an intense, day-long administration lobbying effort aimed at winning a showdown with Congress over the MX missile.

Warning that an effective nuclear deterrent hangs in the balance, Reagan and his top advisers pushed hard for House approval Tuesday of $988 million in MX production funds contained in a $231 billion defense appropriations bill.

Defense Secretary Casper Weinberger, national security adviser William Clark and strategic arms negotiator Edward Rowny restated the case for the MX production money before members of the House GOP caucus.

The administration blitz continued at the Pentagon, where presidential science adviser George Keyworth rebutted technical criticism of the missile, and the State Department, which announced the Soviet Union has tested a new intercontinental ballistic missile.

Presidential aides and congressional leaders predicted a close vote, with debate on the MX clouded by opposition to the "dense pack" basing plan recommended Nov. 22 by Reagan.

Assistant House Democratic leader Tom Foley said Reagan was told "a lack of confidence" in the plan to deploy 100 MX missiles in closely spaced silos in Wyoming could jeopardize the entire program.

REP. BOB MICHEL
Rejection 'wrong signal'

"If the missile doesn't succeed in providing credibility as part of the land-based deterrent, it's useless," Foley said.

House GOP leader Bob Michel, echoing Reagan's arguments, warned rejection of MX funds would "send a wrong signal" to the Soviets. Michel sought to separate approval of the dense pack plan from production funds.

Michel said many members will be inclined to support a "judgment call by the commander in chief." But like other congresional leaders, he declined to predict an outcome.

"Obviously there will be lobbying up to the last minute," he said of the administration effort. "They're going all out."

Backed up by Weinberger and Vice President George Bush, Reagan told lawmakers the MX is an "essential" addition to the U.S. arsenal, needed to keep peace and put pressure on the Soviets in nuclear arms talks.

Late in the day, Reagan sent a letter to all 435 House members in which he said the money is needed to keep the MX, which he renamed "Peacekeeper," on schedule as actual deployment plans are reviewed.

Of the House members called to the White House, few voiced opposition to the MX. Others called Reagan's arguments "persuasive" and "effective."

Rep. James Coyne, R-Pa., said Reagan called it "ironic" that the House vote falls on the 41st anniversary of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor. "He very emotionally explained in many respects how World War II came about because we didn't have an effective deterrent," Coyne said.

Rep. Carroll Hubbard, D-Ky., said he expected to vote against the MX as "a symbol of cutting back somewhere on defense spending." Rep. Allen Ertel, R-Minn., said Reagan failed win him over.

House re-elects its leaders

WASHINGTON (UPI) — House Speaker Thomas O'Neill, GOP leader Bob Michel and other House leaders won re-election easily Monday as Democrats and Republicans met to organize for the 98th Congress.

Major rules changes were scheduled for consideration today, including a tightening of Democratic party discipline, a rule making it more difficult to force consideration of constitutional amendments and restrictions on riders to appropriations bills that often are used for social issues such as anti-abortion amendments.

Re-elected without opposition were all Democratic leaders including O'Neill, Democratic leader Jim Wright of Texas, caucus chairman Gillis Long of Louisiana and caucus secretary Geraldine Ferraro of New York. Tom Foley of Washington was re-appointed party whip.

In contrast to the bloody battles of the past, Michel and all other GOP leaders also were re-elected, including whip Trent Lott of Mississippi. A contest for Research Committee chairman — evaporated when Ed Bethune of Arkansas dropped out of the race in favor of James Martin of North Carolina.

The Republicans also re-elected Rep. Jack Kemp of New York chairman of the Republican Conference, Jack Edwards of Alabama as vice chairman and Dick Cheney of Wyoming as chairman of the policy committee.

Rep. Robert Lagomarsino of California was elected secretary, replacing Rep. Clair Burgener of California, who is retiring from the House.

Democratic leaders said the proposed House rules changes would have no trouble in the caucus, although they would drastically affect future legislation.

Stubborn suspension span surrenders, topples into river

BELLOWS FALLS, Vt. (UPI) — A stubborn suspension bridge declared too rickety for safety — but which delighted crowds by withstanding repeated demolition attempts — bowed to the inevitable Monday and toppled into the Connecticut River.

About 275 people watched as the 650-foot long steel span fell into the river at 10:40 a.m. However, the cheers lacked the spirit of a rousing ovation Sunday by about 3,000 people who saw it withstand three successive explosions.

The structure linking Bellows Falls with North Walpole, N.H., had been the lohgest single-arch bridge in the country when built in 1905. But it took two days, five explosions and a 4-inch cut from a cutting torch to dislodge the structure.

Even then, it continued to frustrate experts. The bridge remained intact when it toppled sideways into the river.

Robert Duncan, the demolition crew foreman, estimated it will take two weeks — and some underwater cutting — to dismantle the felled structure and retrieve its pieces.

Present generation enjoys advantages

We've been hearing for years that this generation of Americans — people under 40 — are the most pampered, catered to and wish-fulfilled of any in American or world history.

Maybe we should have expected it, but now, some demographers are saying the generation hasn't been so fortunate, that it is, in fact, a "gypped" generation of Americans.

Sorry, that's not how it looks from here. There is, to be sure, a darker side to the generation's coming of age. Confidence in Social Security is falling. A threat of nuclear war hangs over all.

Perhaps most importantly, we may be no happier. Self-analysis grows among what has been aptly called the "me" generation — and with it, distress over self-fulfillment. Marriages are rockier and divorces more common.

But despite these problems, the post-World War II generation hardly is underprivileged. Indeed, to perhaps any other generation in human history, the last half of the 20th century would look like an ideal time to be alive.

We listen to people waxing nostalgic, but any objective analysis of most of human history shows there were some pretty rough periods.

Take 1776, for example. Not a bad year, you say. The infant mortality rate was enormous, life expectancy was less than 50 years and if you happened to be black in America, chances are you were owned by someone.

How about the 1890s? Public hangings were routine and except in a few states, women couldn't vote. So much for civil liberties.

Want to go back further? The 1300s were a pleasant period — if you were the one in three who survived the plague. The second century, under the "good" Roman emperors Trajan and Hadrian were peaceful, provided you weren't a Celt or a Gaul living across the wall from the Roman army.

By way of contrast, advances of the past 20 years have affected millions of Americans, mostly for the better. College has become widely available to virtually anyone who wants to work for it; economic success and a relatively high standard of living are the norm in much of America; the work force has shifted away from the blue-collar jobs of older industries and focused on the high technology of the computer.

Our physical health is better than that of our parents — if we would just quit smoking and get a bit more exercise. Tremendous numbers of women have entered the work force, and women now can be found in increasing numbers in many professions, in towns and cities everywhere in America.

Of course, such changes bring other problems and will require new solutions. But that has been the course of humanity for centuries. We are not gypped as a generation by having the opportunity to try to solve them.

Truth and the defense budget

The Pentagon is seriously considering the use of lie detectors to test the veracity of its 3 million employees as well as defense contractors, and government workers in other departments. They say they want to use the polygraph tests for security reasons.

I have no objection to Defense resorting to lie detectors providing that the top people take them, too, particularly when testifying on The Hill concerning the military budget.

It doesn't seem too much to ask Secretary Weinberger, his top assistants and the high-level brass to put on electrodes when they face a House or Senate Armed Services Committee. With the help of this equipment all of us might be better informed as to what a weapons system will really cost.

"The congressional committee will come to order. General, are you comfortable? Let's just test the polygraph machine to see if it is working. What branch of the service are you in, sir?"

"Nothing can stop the United States Air Force."

"The lie detector checks out fine. We'll now proceed with the questioning. Could you give us some idea what the B-1 bomber will cost?"

"Two-hundred million dollars."

"Hmmm, the polygraph seems to indicate that is the wrong answer."

"I'm sorry, sir. I didn't understand the question. Do you mean with wings and wheels on it?"

"I'm afraid I wasn't specific. Yes, I do."

"To get it in the air it will cost $234,567,891.50."

"Good. Now this would only be the bare plane and not include such items as radar, communications, bomb racks, cruise missile launcher and parking lights?"

"That's correct, sir. We might add on another $40 million for the equipment, give or take $5 million."

CASPAR WEINBERGER

"The polygraph is acting up again, General. How much did you say?"

"Sixty-five million dollars."

"Very good, General. Now may I ask you about the tests the Air Force has made on the B-1? Are your people satisfied that the contractor will bring in the plane at that price without serious overruns?"

"We're certain of it, sir. They should deliver it on schedule without any bugs in it."

"The needle seems to be flying all over the place. Are you sure of this?"

"No, sir. We're not. But we need the plane."

"We're going to give you the plane, General. We just want to know what we're getting for our money."

"Every plane has bugs in it."

"Don't pout. We know that. Which brings us to the question of the C-5A cargo plane. We understand a lot of cracks are showing up in the wings. How much will it cost to put on new wings?"

"Half a billion dollars."

"Would you like to try that again?"

"I meant to say a billion dollars. These electrodes are giving me a headache."

"We're sorry about that, General. But actually the idea for introducing the lie detector came out of the Defense Department. Since you people have been using it so successfully we decided to use it, too."

"We're only using it to find out who the whistle-blowers are in the department, and who is leaking detrimental stuff to the press. We would never use it on someone discussing the Defense Department budget."

"Why not, General?"

"Because when it comes to military spending testimony, we consider ourselves officers and gentlemen."

Just perhaps, Kennedy may not want to be president

BOSTON — What I keep remembering is the exit poll. A month ago, as I left the voting booth, someone from a TV station handed me a short questionnaire.

That second "ballot" had a list of questions about Ted Kennedy. Had I voted for him? Did I think he was a good senator? Did I want him to run for President?

Yes, I answered, I'd voted for him. Yes, I rated him pretty high as a senator. But no, in my gut, I didn't want him to run for President.

That day I questioned some other friends and neighbors in my precinct. Most of them had voted for the man and, yet, when you got down to it, they hoped he wouldn't run for President.

Well, I thought about that when Ted Kennedy stood up in a Senate chamber Wednesday and said he wasn't going to run in 1984. The one word that seemed to come automatically from friends who heard or read that announcement, the most spontaneous feeling I picked up all day, was "relief."

These were not Mondale people, nor Glenn people nor Republicans. These were Massachusetts people and, to some degree, Kennedy people. And yet they were "relieved." Just like his kids.

A good deal has been said about Kennedy's decision to drop out for the sake of his children. Some people, cynical about everything but their own cynicism, doubt that rationale. I don't. Anyone who has seen Ted Kennedy with his kids, any kids, has seen him at his most human. Fathering may be the thing he does the best and talks about the worst.

But nobody has said why his kids want Ted out. These aren't small kids who want their daddy home every night. Two are in college, one in a boarding school outside Boston. I'm sure they want and need time with him. But it's more complex than that. If Ted Kennedy was thinking of his sons and daughter, they were thinking of him. If he did it for them, they did it for him.

My bet is that his kids just want to protect their father. They don't want him vulnerable to some nut out there with a gun, a nut who belongs to a culture in which a rock group is named The Dead Kennedys. They don't want him vulnerable to another round of interrogations about his "character" and his private life. They may not even want to see him, with his back brace and his exhaustion, running, running, running. They surely don't want him to lose again.

I catch a similar feeling among more distant Kennedy supporters. In this, his home state, we have our own collection of Kennedy lovers and Kennedy haters, but there is a streak I can only label "protective."

You can walk into a thousand homes in Boston and find a picture of John F. Kennedy in the living room. We've been through 25 years of Kennedy dramas. We know that there's some heat that a Kennedy brings to a campaign.

Some believe that this is the wrong time for such a hot candidate for President. Others feel he's accumulated too many qualms on his resume. But many, reluctant to open another act, simply believe that Kennedy is best, even happiest, in his supporting role.

People who live in Kennedy country assume that Ted has run for the presidency against shadows. Ask someone from Massachusetts if Teddy would make a good President and subconsciously they match him — but not against Ronald Reagan. They match him against Jack and Bobby. In some ways, they suspect he runs his own campaigns against Bobby and Jack, for Joe's approval. Isn't there a time to get off the hook?

During that 1980 botch of a primary, I wrote that Kennedy was campaigning as if he didn't really want it. His candidacy didn't look like a choice but rather an acceptance of expectations, even destiny.

The only time he sounded comfortable in his own skin, his own voice, was when he began to lose. Once again, on Wednesday, Ted Kennedy was best — sure, articulate, easy — as he bowed out of the running.

The political types are looking for secret reasons for Kennedy's decision. They are talking about polls and Chappaquiddick and 1988. But maybe the secret is that Ted Kennedy really doesn't want to run for the presidency. Maybe the secret is that he feels what a lot of us in his home state feel, what his kids feel. Maybe this morning he feels relieved.

Letters/ Doctors shouldn't 'get free education'

Pay off medical loans

Recently, I read an article in the Twin Falls Times-News dated Nov. 28, 1982, entitled "Doctors' Bills Draw 'Fleece.'" This article regarded the Public Health Service allowing doctors to "welch" on loans they received while in school.

I find this an appalling event. The medical profession is one of the highest paid professions in this country. If professionals are allowed to negate on their obligations what about those families who are working three to four jobs between two people and barely making half the yearly salary these doctors are making.

My husband and I presently have three incomes and are in the process of paying back a small educational loan ourselves. With our three incomes we are still bringing in less than half of the $80,000 annual income of the doctors quoted in the newspaper article.

I feel that doctors should be forced to pay their debts just as they force us to pay our debts for their medical services. Why should they be allowed free education at our expense and then charge us again for their services?

Many other people of this country are less fortunate than my husband and I and I am sure that they have medical bills along with loans to pay, too. I hope that more people will see the importance of everyone, including doctors, to pay for their own loans and this situation can be corrected.

Courts control population

America, let us applaud the American judicial system! Our judicial system deserves special recognition for the relentless pursuit of population control.

Nationwide publications report daily population controls instituted by our Supreme Court. In examining individual reports we find a staggering amount of proof to let us examine these reports as a whole:

Drunk drivers are released within hours to kill innocent adults and children again and again. Diabolically clever but simple solutions! Recruit drunk drivers to kill future parents!

Convicted murderers sentenced to death are given stays of execution which lead to appeals and eventually a quick parole. More children, babies and adults beaten to death, stabbed, shot, whatever. Even more fiendish!

Insanity pleas (their most clever scheme) are relished by the courts. It is their cake and frosting. The courts are cleverly disguised and seem blameless.

With an entire squad of drunk drivers, murderers, psychos, etc., the Supreme Courts have on hand a 24-hour elite force to eliminate our future parents.

Could anyone other than these sage persons devise a more efficient system, a more legal system, by issuing a legal license to murder innocent citizens and future parents, thusly stunting population growth?

Put United Way over top

I am disturbed by the excuses I read in the paper for the United Way Drive falling short of its goal of $190,000. No matter how bad the economy is I cannot believe that most people could not part with $1 per month or $12 per year.

If 16,000 persons or 30 percent of the population of Twin Falls County were to pledge that much the goal of the United Way would be exceeded. Also, if those who are better off would pledge $5 per month or $60 per year it would take less than 3,200 persons or 6 percent of the county population to exceed the United Way goals.

From these figures it is obvious to me that there are a lot of people in Twin Falls County who are not willing to support our agencies as Ronald Reagan has requested and by this reluctance they are really asking for increased taxes so that Uncle Sam can do it.

In these closing days of the Drive it would be wonderful if the people of Twin Falls County would re-evaluate their attitude and put United Way of Twin Falls over its goal.

Kennedy divorce case starts

BARNSTABLE, Mass. (UPI) — Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., and his wife Joan began divorce proceedings Monday in Barnstable County Probate and Family Court, citing an "irretrievable breakdown" in their marriage of more than 24 years.

Following the proceeding, Mrs. Kennedy issued a statement through her New York attorneys saying she and her husband would share custody of their son Patrick, 15. There was no mention of the couple's other two children, Teddy Jr., 21, and Kara, 22.

Mrs. Kennedy said the divorce is due to personal differences between her and the senator. The divorce will become final in one year, the statement said.

Stevenson ready for recount

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — Attorneys for Democrat Adlai E. Stevenson III compiled results Monday from a partial vote canvass to wrap up their case for Illinois' first statewide recount of a gubernatorial election.

The former senator's petition will be filed with the Illinois Supreme Court before the afternoon deadline today, a Stevenson spokeswoman said.

Republican Gov. James R. Thompson, meanwhile, announced formation of an Illinois Inaugural Committee to plan his swearing-in Jan 10. A spokesman said Stevenson's chances to reverse the election are "nonexistent" based on the few votes he gained in a partial recount.

Guatemala aid still unsure

WASHINGTON (UPI) — No decision has been made on resuming U.S. military assistance to Guatemala, despite President Reagan's belief that nation has made progress on human rights, a State Department official said Monday.

Reagan said during his Latin American trip Saturday Guatemala's new government is improving its human rights record and suggested he is considering restoring military aid.

"The president did not promise arms sales to Guatemala," said the official, who requested he not be identified. "These decisions have not been made," he said.

The possible assistance under review is considered as a "commercial sale" — including spare parts for helicopters — not as "military aid," the official stressed.

Court upholds handgun ban

CHICAGO (UPI) — A federal appeals court Monday upheld the village of Morton Grove's ordinance prohibiting the sale and possession of handguns.

A panel of judges from the 7th Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals ruled 2-1 the ban does not violate either the Illinois or the U.S. Constitution.

Alan M. Gottlieb, chairman of the Citizens Committee for the Right to Keep and Bear Arms, accused the panel of "contorting legal arguments to fit their own peculiar notions of gun control."

Gottlieb said the split decision should be helpful in attempts to have an appeal heard by the U.S. Supreme Court.

Court to decide discrimination cases

By ELIZABETH OLSON
United Press International

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court plunged into new discrimination issues Monday, agreeing to hear cases that affect equal pregnancy benefits and illegitimate children.

One dispute involves a new twist on sex discrimination — whether male workers must receive the same pregnancy benefits for their wives that female workers enjoy. A lower court decided that any difference in treatment violates federal anti-bias laws.

A high court ruling in favor of equalizing benefits could prove costly to businesses, which might be forced to pay higher insurance premiums.

The justices, announcing the last cases they will hear this term, also agreed to take up a challenge to a Tennessee law that sets a two-year time limit for a mother to sue to establish the paternity of her child.

A Memphis woman, who sued for paternal support 10 years after her son was born, said the law's exception to the statute of limitations granted for children on welfare is discriminatory.

In other action Monday, the court:

•Changed its mind about settling a dispute over a $7.95 table cigarette lighter, citing procedural reasons for dismissing the Illinois case.

•Over one dissent, let stand a ruling that the National Football League illegally tried to block team owners from investing in U.S. soccer teams in 1978.

•Rejected arguments by a Vietnamese bank officer, who fled his country just before the Communist takeover, that the Treasury Department is freezing assets of Vietnamese refugees for use as a bargaining chip in future negotiations between the United States and Vietnam.

The pregnancy benefits case was brought to the high court by a Newport News, Va., shipbuilding company contesting a ruling that it is unlawful to limit insurance benefits covering pregnancy for spouses of male employees.

At issue is whether discriminating because of pregnancy is automatically illegal sex discrimination forbidden under a section of the 1964 Civil Rights Act.

The Pregnancy Discrimination Act of 1978 forbids discrimination because of pregnancy, childbirth or related medical conditions. In rules implementing the law, the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission said a company providing health coverage for pregnancy must "equally cover" pregnancy-related expenses of spouses of male employees.

Union balks at Chrysler wage offer

DETROIT (UPI) — Chrysler Corp. offered wage plans to U.S. and Canadian workers Monday but union leaders in Toronto immediately rejected the proposal, dimming chances for a settlement before a midweek deadline.

United Auto Workers President Douglas Fraser said Chrysler offered a two-year contract and a wage increase for 43,000 U.S. workers but the offer "doesn't meet our objectives" for an upfront pay hike.

He said a counter proposal would be submitted by the union Tuesday.

But UAW leaders in Canada speedily rejected the No. 3 automaker's offer and said it was so unsatisfactory it likely killed hopes for any pre-Christmas settlement.

"They made what I guess is called a wage proposal," Canadian UAW Director Robert White said. "It comes nowhere close to what it will take to reach a settlement. We are literally miles apart."

White said the UAW bargaining team unanimously rejected the deal during a private caucus.

"If they think the workers will cave in for this proposal, Chrysler has misread the situation," he said.

He added the proposal made it even less likely the union could reach and ratify a settlement by the Dec. 13 deadline.

What's what

Neither you nor I would give $3,000 for the gall bladder of a bear, certainly, but there are those souls in South Korea who will do so, gladly. Somebody has convinced them it makes good medicine.

Credit that French literary light, Alexander Dumas — an excellent chef, too — with the invention of the doggie bag. Wait, I realize nobody knows who first put leftovers in a take-out container, but Dumas formalized the procedure.

All flight attendants aboard the White House press corps chartered jetliner must be young, female and single — by press corps directive to the airline company.

SAVED LETTERS

Q. I've saved many letters in an old trunk. They're from two men I'd known before my first marriage, from my first husband, and from several men I'd dated before my second marriage. My husband thinks I should burn them. But that's like trying to rewrite history, to pretend these men never existed. What does your Love and War man think?

A. If you still want them to be a part of your life, keep them. If not, get rid of them. Nothing so complicated about that, what? Might add, if you keep them, get your current husband to write some letters, so he can be a part of your life, too, after he's gone.

SEPTIC TANKS

You might not think that a How-to book on the care of septic tanks would become such a popular volume, but in fact, just such a manual is among the 10 most-wanted publications from the Government Printing Office. That bureau's all-time best-seller is "Infant Care" at 18 million copies since 1919.

"A "cranny" is a crevice. Good word in its own right. But our Language man has never heard it used unless preceded with "every nook and..." Have you?

Daily Horoscope

GENERAL TENDENCIES: This is your day to take a good look at your surroundings and then decide whether or not any improvements should be made. Consider the cost involved before making any changes.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Come to a better accord with allies. Do not turn a sensitive person against you by some thoughtless word or act.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Make sure you keep the promises made to others. Do something about improving your health and appearance.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Put a particular talent you have to work now and impress higher-ups. Teamwork is the key to greater success.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Take time to cement better relations with family members and make the future brighter. Be poised.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Plan how to make your possessions more attractive, but don't seek the assistance of others. Think constructively.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) A good day to plan how to have greater abundance in the future. Consult business expert for advice you need.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) If you cooperate more with allies, you can easily gain your main objective. Take time to improve your appearance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You have good judgment early in the day, so make important decisions at this time. Use extreme care in motion.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Ideal day to do something thoughtful for your friends and gain their goodwill. Express happiness.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Engage in activities that are more profitable and then show that you are true to your beliefs. Avoid a temptation to splurge.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Making new contacts now can help you advance in your line of endeavor. Avoid one who has an eye on your assets.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Make a new plan with a partner and then follow through in a sensible way and gain your aims. Attend the social tonight.

IF YOUR CHILD WAS BORN TODAY... he or she will know how to communicate sensibly with others and upon reaching maturity will do well in civic matters where new ideas are encouraged. Engineering would be a good field here, whether male or female.

Feldman's last rites on upbeat

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Comedian Marty Feldman was eulogized Monday at services tinged with laughter and jazz music, then buried near the graves of Stan Laurel and Buster Keaton, two comic geniuses he idolized.

About 100 relatives and friends attended the 20-minute service in the Hollywood Hills, including fellow comedians Cheech Marin of Cheech and Chong, Dom DeLuise and director-comedian Mel Brooks.

A five-man band, all friends of the late comedian, played Dixieland tunes and Henry Pollock eulogized his fellow actor.

"People recognized the love and humanity in him," Pollock said. "He approached everyone as an equal. That's why children loved him."

Feldman, 49, who was an established writer and director as well as comedian, died of a heart attack last Thursday in Mexico City after completing work in his latest motion picture "Yellowbeard," a spoof of pirate movies.

"Marty Feldman never liked funerals, so I guess he wouldn't have liked this one. But he showed up anyway, didn't he?" Pollack said.

Japan to offer concessions

TOKYO (UPI) — Japan, under strong American pressure, indicated Monday it will offer new trade concessions to defuse protectionist moves in Congress and clear the way for a U.S. visit by new Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone.

Japanese officials, in a meeting with a U.S. delegation led by Undersecretary of State for Economic Affairs Allen Wallis, hinted they will work out a new package of measures to open the Japanese market to American goods by mid-January.

Japan is expected to announce the new steps before Nakasone leaves for Washington Jan. 17 for his first meeting with President Reagan.

Poland blasts U.S. policy

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — In an outburst of anti-Americanism, the official Communist Party newspaper Monday blasted the Reagan administration for "wild west saloon" language against Poland and U.S. Embassy sources said two staff members had received threatening notes.

In addition, a Polish employee of the U.S. embassy was beaten up as he came home from work, although U.S. officials said there was no evidence the attack was because of the man's connection with the embassy.

Prof claims triple-agent role

LONDON (UPI) — Canadian-born Professor Hugh Hambleton admitted Monday he passed NATO secrets to the Soviets but claimed he was a triple agent who also spied on France for Canada.

In a dramatic exchange in the historic Old Bailey courtroom with Attorney General Sir Michael Havers, Hambleton admitted that giving secret documents to the Soviets in Paris could be classified as spying.

Hambleton, 60, testified in his own defense in the second week of his trial before Britain's premier criminal court.

He claimed he was working for French and Canadian intelligence as a triple agent, feeding low grade information on behalf of both countries to the Soviets, while also keeping Canadian agents abreast of what the French secret service was up to.

Mexico runs short of trading dollars

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — A flood of money out of Mexico has left banks south of the border unable to meet a government promise to provide dollars to businessmen and travelers, executives along the U.S. frontier said Monday.

An executive in the border city of Reynosa, across from Hidalgo, Texas, said in a telephone interview that local banks by Friday had virtually run out of dollars. All the sources asked for anonymity.

Mexico City's daily newspaper Novedades reported Mexicans were carrying millions of dollars out of the country, taking advantage of a loophole in the currency regulations to make instant profits by carrying cash across the border.

Mexico currently sells up to $500 a year to its citizens traveling out of the country. In August, the Mexican government established exchange controls and promised businessmen and travelers that banks would be able to provide dollars.

Government banks issue money orders to Mexican travelers in dollars at the rate of 70 pesos to the dollar, allowing people to purchase a $500 bank note for 35,000 pesos.

The money orders can be cashed in U.S. border cities at up to 130 pesos per dollar, giving a profit of 30,000 pesos. The minimum wage in Mexico is 363 pesos per day, so the profit is equal to about three months' salary to some people.

The Mexico City newspaper El Heraldo reported "our informants assure us that this week we will have a new parity" for the Mexican peso.

It said the new rate would "be regulated in accordance with the international market," noting the exchange rate at California border exchange houses is about 130 pesos per dollar. The Chicago monetary exchange quotes the peso at 128 to the dollar.

Presidential spokesman Manuel Alonso said predictions about changes in parity are "pure speculation."

The Mexican currency was devalued in February from 27 pesos to the dollar to about 50. It dropped to about 130 in August, but the government imposed exchange controls to fix the parity at 70 pesos per dollar.

Economists have repeatedly predicted Mexico would be forced to remove currency restrictions. Mexican border exchange houses recently were allowed to offer 116 pesos per dollar to allow them to compete with U.S. money traders.

Police delay search of Smith's home

HARARE, Zimbabwe (UPI) — Former Prime Minister Ian Smith was driven home Monday to help police search his house, only to be whisked away when his police escort saw reporters and television crews waiting outside the house.

Police briefly detained three foreign correspondents, two of whom tried to film Smith and wife Janet at the Harare police station and a third who was waiting for the former prime minister at his house.

The black-majority government of Zimbabwe, formerly Rhodesia, has confirmed Smith and his wife are at the center of a police investigation, but have not given the reasons.

Pearl Harbor whistle to mark hour of raid

HONOLULU (UPI) — A moment before 7:55 a.m. today, a shipyard whistle will be sounded at Pearl Harbor, bringing all activity at the Pacific military base to a standstill.

The whistle, to be followed by a moment of silence to honor the fallen, will mark the 41st anniversary of the Dec. 7, 1941, Japanese surprise attack on Pearl Harbor.

Only the whistle, a gunfire volley from an honor guard and a Hawaii Air National Guard fly-over will echo across the now-still waters of Pearl Harbor.

Private memorial services will be held aboard the USS Arizona Memorial to honor persons killed in the bombing which plunged the United States into World War II.

Joseph K. Taussig Jr., deputy assistant secretary of the Navy, who was severely wounded aboard USS Nevada during the attack, will give the keynote address at the ceremony.

Taussig was seriously injured while manning an anti-aircraft battle station. He refused medical evacuation and took control of all the ship's batteries.

The ceremony also will include floral wreath presentations by various military, patriotic and civic organizations.

Our BestSellers...

Year after Year after Year.

Before you decide which alternative best fits your needs, perhaps we can make some helpful suggestions in guiding you.

ALL SAVERS CERTIFICATE — THE TAX EXEMPT ALTERNATIVE

The All-Savers Certificate is a sound investment. This high yield tax exempt one year certificate was approved in 1981 by Congress. The All-Savers Certificate can give you a higher after tax return than a Money Market Fund. This depends on current rates of interest and your particular tax bracket. The key is your real, after-tax rate of return.

If you have already earned your full tax exemption from the All-Savers Certificate, you should consider and perhaps select an alternative retirement investment. Just come talk to our Customer Service Representatives at any office. They will analyze your needs and make sure you get the program that's best for you. Remember, you have until December 31, 1982 to reinvest in an All-Savers Certificate, and until you file your 1982 income tax return to decide what alternative tax shelter is best.

IRA "Certificate" Account
You may purchase as many IRA Certificates as you wish! Each certificate has its own minimum deposit amount and maturity.

IRA "Growth" Account
With a minimum opening deposit of $100, the IRA "Growth" Account gives you the opportunity to make additional contributions as often as you like and in any amount.

IRA "Directed Investment Trust" Account
For those customers with substantial IRA roll-over contributions, this plan offers the flexibility and choice of investing in stocks, bonds, government securities, or any other qualified investment.

Keogh Retirement Plan
This plan requires only that a person derive a portion of his or her income from self-employment. You may invest up to 15% of your earned income or $15,000, whichever is lower and deduct this amount from your taxable income.

While You're Deciding...

Invest your money (minimum $7,500) into our 3-Month "Flexible" Money Market Certificate that pays "Flexible" yields in a short period, or your Savings Account. In doing so, you have ample time to decide the tax plan that is best for you while your money is earning high interest!

For more information and complete details on tax planning, contact any branch of Twin Falls Bank & Trust today.

The All-Savers Certificate and "Flexible" Money Market Certificate are subject to substantial penalty for early withdrawal. The Federal law requires the loss of your tax exemption if the All-Savers Certificate is used for collateral for loans or redeemed before maturity.

*All Savers Certificate Effective Annual Investment Yield and Nominal Rate of Interest are the same.

No West MX picket planned

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (UPI) — A spokeswoman for Western Solidarity, a coalition of anti-MX groups in eight western states, says the group has no plans to organize or participate in demonstrations agains the MX missile system.

Maria Painter said the question of whether the group should become involed in anti-MX demonstrations was deemed "inappropriate" by the 60 representatives who attended the coalition's organizational meeting in Cheyenne over the weekend, and the matter was not discussed further.

Ms. Painter, of Nevada's Citizen Alert, said the group's immediate goal is to mount a massive telephone and telegram campaign urging congressmen to eliminate funding for the MX in the U.S. House this week.

Members are optimistic that funding for the missile system will be defeated in Congress, because in the past, the more congressmen have learned about the proposal the more they have opposed it, Ms. Painter said during a news conference Sunday that marked the end of the group's first meeting.

She said coalition representatives plan to meet again, but no date has been set.

During the meeting representatives from Wyoming, Colorado, Nebraska, Utah, Nevada, Montana, and Idaho signed a "mutual aid pact" to work to defeat President Reagan's proposal to base 100 MX missiles in a dense pack configuration in the southeastern corner of Wyoming. New Mexico is the eighth state involved in the group.

The pact says the mutual aid will include financial support to help Wyoming groups resist the basing plan, political pressure on congressional delegations and the president, and public education to inform citizens of the consequences of the MX proposal.

Ms. Painter said the group is uncertain where it will get its funding.

Nevada brothel holds open house

BATTLE MOUNTAIN, Nev. (UPI) — Madam Julie Hickman said the ladies of the community always ask her about life in a brothel, so she threw a big party to let them see for themselves.

Ms. Hickman, operator of the Cafeo Club, invited about 300 women from Battle Mountain and neighboring towns. Men were not on Sunday's invitation list.

The women sipped champagne, tried on the latest styles at a fashion show and talked with the six prostitutes employed at the place.

"I wanted to do it for the ladies because they always ask me what its like in here," said Ms. Hickman, a member of Business and Professional Women's Club, Chamber of Commerce and the Humane Society in this northern Nevada community.

"It's the biggest party I've ever had. I got five cases of champagne."

Most of the women said they attended out of curiosity.

"I just wanted to peek around a bit," one said.

One of the prostitutes handed out tickets for door prizes. Asked how she liked the work, she said, "It's better than being a secretary like I was before working here."

Defense jabs former lover's story in murder trial of school librarian

SPOKANE (UPI) — Neva Henning's attorney grilled the prosecution's star witness Monday, leaning hard on his apparent inability to clearly recall the details surrounding the 1981 shooting death of Glen Duane Henning.

It was the third day on the witness stand for Richard Miller, 20, who admitted he shot Henning, but only at the insistence of Mrs. Henning.

The Rosalia school teacher and librarian, 48, is charged with being an accomplice to Miller in the murder of her husband, also 48.

At his trial, Miller maintained he was innocent of any involvement in Henning's death and suggested an intruder apparently shot Henning during the course of a burglary.

Miller maintained that posture until August, when he contacted authorities and struck a bargain to testify against the widow in exchange for a reduction in his life sentence.

The new version of what happened became public last week when Mrs. Henning's trial began.

Mrs. Henning's attorney, Jeff Morris, has maintained from the beginning that the seven-woman, five-man jury would have to determine for itself which person was lying: Miller or Mrs. Henning, who is expected to testify later this week.

Tracing events leading up to the Jan. 8, 1981 shooting of Henning, Morris compared Miller's testimony so far with statements he gave Whitman County authorities after the sentence-reduction deal was struck in August.

Through this process, Morris has attempted to show the jury that Miller's story had changed so many times that even he could not keep his story straight.

Miller maintained he had had an affair with Mrs. Henning, but under careful scrutiny by Morris was unable to pinpoint just when the encounters began and ended.

Miller would not alter his testimony alleging the affair, but was hazy on the details, admitting under questioning that he would not be able to identify any possible distinguishing marks on Mrs. Henning's body "because the lights were off."

"Did you have sex regularly up to the time of the shooting?" Morris asked.

"No," said Miller.

"But you told authorities in August that you were having sexual intercourse with Mrs. Henning up to the time of the shooting," said Morris.

"That's true," said Miller after looking at the transcript.

"Did you say at one time that if the right person got ahold of her (Neva), they could abuse her kindness," Morris asked as he moved from one end of the courtroom to the other.

"Yes, that's possible," said Miller.

"Did you feel that way and say it," Morris pressed.

"To a degree, yes," said Miller.

"Did you abuse her kindness," Morris asked.

"It's possible, when I lived there," the witness said.

Montana utility's rates under fire as a result of WPPSS involvement

HELENA, Mont. (UPI) — A Montana Public Service commissioner Monday questioned the legality of a request from Pacific Power and Light Co. for more than $2 million in higher rates from its Montana customers to help pay the cost of abandoning Washington Public Power Supply System nuclear generating plants.

In a brief preview of issues to be raised in a Jan. 18 hearing here on PP&L's request, other commissioners indicated agreement with Commissioner John Driscoll of Hamilton.

"If ratepayers are to assume such risks," Driscoll said, "then the ratepayers should own the company."

SOON IB&T WILL HAND YOU MONEY MARKET INVESTING WITH THE SAFETY OF FULL SERVICE BANKING.

Coming:

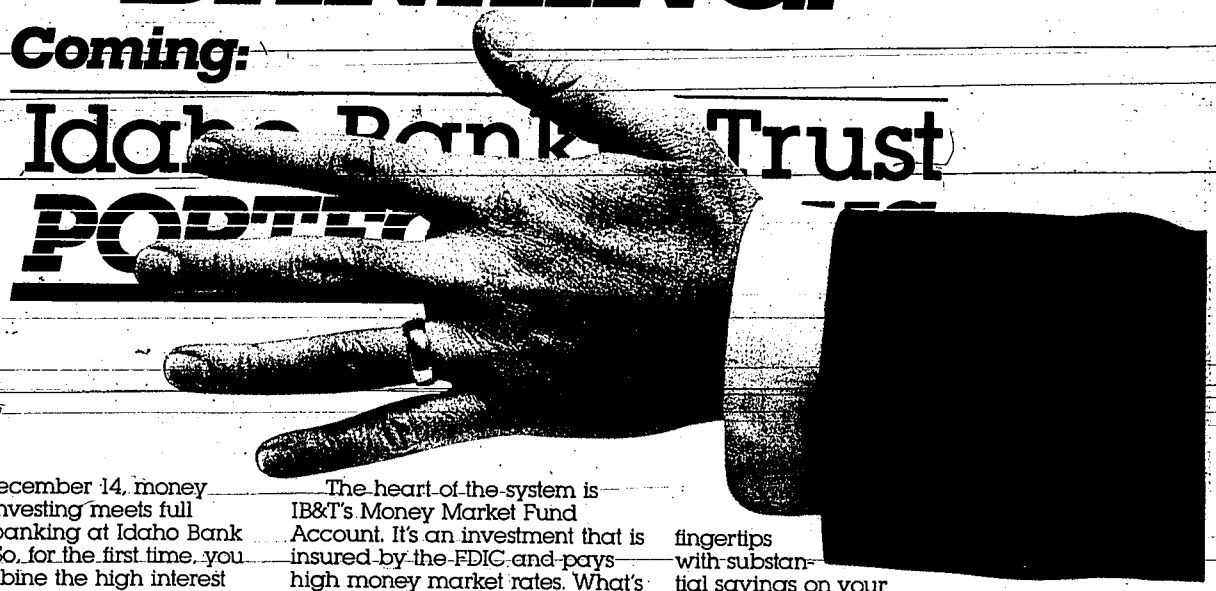
Idaho Bank & Trust

PORTFOLIO PLUS



On December 14, money market investing meets full service banking at Idaho Bank & Trust. So, for the first time, you can combine the high interest earning power of a money market fund with the insured safety of a full service bank.

It's no miracle.

It's Idaho Bank & Trust PORTFOLIO PLUS — a total personal money management system that hands you money market investing with the safety of full service banking.

The heart of the system is IB&T's Money Market Fund Account. It's an investment that is insured by the FDIC and pays high money market rates. What's more, you can get your hands on your funds when you need them. It requires a minimum deposit of $2,500.

The plus in PORTFOLIO PLUS is the extra services. Shortly after the new year, IB&T will announce its Discount Brokerage Service — putting Wall Street at your fingertips with substantial savings on your securities transactions.

Hand it to IB&T to develop a money management system that combines money market investing and full service banking. Come on in to any of the statewide offices of IB&T and get your hands on Idaho Bank & Trust PORTFOLIO PLUS.

Counties prepare lobbying effort on Idaho medical indigency law

BOISE (UPI) — A committee of county officials recommended Monday that their association lobby the Legislature to repeal portions of a medical indigency law that requires counties to pay medical bills of those who have no other means.

The Medical Indigency Committee's recommendation goes to the Idaho Association of Counties for final action Tuesday on what to lobby for in the 1983 Legislature.

The committee also recommended the medical indigency program be replaced with a "medical needy" program that would be funded with federal and state funds, rather than relying on property tax payments from counties.

Much of the discussion centered on the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare's proposal to meet a projected $3 million shortfall by reducing to $400 from the current $610 level the maximum monthly income allowed for a nursing home patient to qualify for Medicaid payments.

County officials say the current medical indigency law would force them to pay the bills of the approximate 700 people who would no longer be eligible for Medicaid under the state's proposed changes.

Canyon County Commissioner Del Hobza pushed for abolishing the current law, saying such an action would persuade lawmakers and hospital owners to help the counties find a funding solution.

Twin Falls County Commissioner Ann Cover unsuccessfully recommended the association back a one-cent hike in the sales tax, with the additional funds to be earmarked for counties' medically indigent programs.

State interest earnings take dive

BOISE (UPI) — Interest earnings from the state's "idle" cash are running just about half of what they were last year, Idaho Treasurer Marjorie Ruth Moon said Monday.

She said the pooled investments earned $251,912 in interest during November for the state's general account and special agency accounts. A year ago the November interest total was about $710,700, she said.

The November interest collections brought the total since July 1 this year to more than $3.8 million, she said. That compared with $6.3 million for the same period during the past fiscal year.

Miss Moon attributed the interest lag to much lower rates being paid nationally. A year ago, interest rates the state obtained averaged about 16 percent but today they are in the 8.5-percent range, she said.

Local school officials brace for upcoming budget battle

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho School Board trustees have drafted a list of legislative proposals in the face of a bleak financial picture that might include cuts in public school funds.

The Idaho School Board Association, at a meeting last week, voted to lobby for an increase from 5 percent to 10 percent in the amount local governments are allowed to hike their property tax revenues each year.

Members also agreed to push for stricter penalties against those who pay their property taxes late. They contend the present penalties, which are less than current interest charges for loans, do not discourage people from making late payments.

The group also voted to protect the "holdback clause," a state law that says any withholding of appropriated state dollars to schools will result in an automatic increase in property tax levies to compensate schools for the funding loss.

State Sen. John Barker, R-Buhl, told a group of Magic Valley educators recently that some legislators may attempt to repeal the holdback law as they deal with a $70 million revenue shortfall.

"We're behind the eight-ball now, and we have to work our way out of it," Barker said.

Wallace development group expects grim 1982 meeting

WALLACE, Idaho (UPI) — The mood is likely to be pretty grim this Wednesday when the Greater Wallace Community Development Corp. holds its annual meeting.

The non-profit organization, which had been instrumental in promoting community development and revitalization, has found itself without funding and support staff now that several key mines in the Silver Valley have closed and many residents have moved to greener pastures.

Officials said the agency recently laid off its paid staff, abandoned its familiar storefront office and accepted the resignation of its director and his assistant.

With unemployment in Shoshone County running at about 35 percent, officials are not optimistic about the near-term future of their organization.

The search for a replacement for resigning director Rick Masseno has been put on hold and funds have been difficult to raise from the normal source — business contributions.

But officials said they will go ahead with their scheduled annual meeting despite all the problems.

Council overturns zoning board decision

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — No zoning changes will be required to allow the construction of conventional homes in a mobile-home subdivision, Twin Falls City Council ruled Monday night.

The unanimous decision overturned a determination by the Twin Falls Planning and Zoning Commission that significant differences exist between the two types of housing at Villa Del Rio Estates and that rezoning was needed.

Also Monday, council declared that building permits be issued to Aurora Capital Corp., the developer of the subdivision, for the addition of 19 conventional homes.

The city planning director, LaMar Orton, had delayed issuing the permits, saying that "radical" changes had taken place in the subdivision and a zoning change was needed.

Zoning commission members voted 5-4 last week that Villa Del Rio needed to undergo a public hearing to alter its designation as a mobile-home subdivision. The decision was made after commission members toured the subdivision, located near Washington Street North and Pole Line Road. Public hearings were set for Dec. 14 and Dec. 20.

But in an effort to allow the developers to begin construction before the ground freezes, the commission recommended that eight building permits be issued after Aurora Capital signed an indemnity agreement, which would free the city from liability if construction later was delayed.

Monday, Paul Beeks, the attorney for Aurora Capital, told council members he felt that both the original zoning designation and the legal definitions of a mobile home permitted the construction of site-built homes that resembled mobile homes. Therefore, he contended, no zoning change — and no public hearing process — was necessary.

Beeks asked council members to tell the city staff to "issue building permits, period, without an indemnification agreement."

Seventeen mobile homes and 15 site-built homes already have been installed at the subdivision.

Mark Peperzak, the president of Aurora Capital, argued that the city had given "de-facto approval" of site-built homes by issuing 15 building permits this summer for site-built homes. To halt the project now would cause "undue financial hardship," he said.

Both Orton and City Manager Tom Courtney told council members Monday that the original development concept, presented back in 1980, was for a mobile-home subdivision limited to double-wide units. Courtney said he and Orton felt significant changes had taken place and a new zoning determination was needed.

But a motion by Councilman Paul Newton that building permits be issued was passed without dissent.

Joan Brawley, a real-estate planner for Aurora Capital, said afterward that company representatives were "elated" at the decision.

Orton also said he was happy with the outcome.

"We had some input that there had been a change. The council decided there has not been a change. That's all we asked for in the first place," he said.

In a council work session held Monday afternoon, Mayor Chris Talkington said the city staff had acted correctly in delaying the permits and bringing the matter before council.

However, Councilman Emery Petersen voiced strong reservations during the work session about how the issue was raised originally.

Concerns about changes in the subdivision were brought to Orton's attention by Ken Roy, a zoning commission member.

Petersen, noting that Roy is in the real-estate business and a potential competitor with Aurora, said, "I think we have a conflict of interest which is no good for the city."

He expressed concerns that Roy had voted, not abstained, on the Villa Del Rio issue, and he suggested that Roy be moved to the city's Parks and Recreation Committee.

Roy could not be reached for comment Monday night.

United Way drive reaches 70 percent

Campaign will end on Friday

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The United Way campaign in the Twin Falls area has reached 70 percent of its $190,000 goal, with less than a week left in the 1983 campaign.

At a meeting Monday, United Way executive director Sandy Thomas reported that the fund-raising effort has netted $132,300. The campaign officially ends Friday.

Although campaign officials had predicted earlier that the drive might fall $50,000 short of its goal, they hope a new idea will generate the pledges required to meet the goal.

The plan centers around encouraging 1,000 people to pledge $1 a week for a year to raise the $50,000, said Fred Florence, the United Way campaign chairman.

Last week, a letter signed by Florence was sent to large Magic Valley employers, asking the companies to announce the $1-a-week schedule to employees who had not contributed yet.

This week, campaign volunteers will follow-up on the letters to the businesses.

"This has never been tried. We don't know how it will work," Florence said Monday. Earlier, campaign workers discussed publicizing the plan on a weekend radio-telethon, but nothing definite was set at Monday's meeting.

United Way officials plan to have most of the campaign's loose ends tied up by Friday, but they also expect more contributions to come in after the campaign is officially over, Thomas said.

"Everybody has done a good job. I don't know what else we can do," Florence said. "We still have a week left, and there's a lot of volunteers out there trying."

PUC 'ducks' dispute between Gooding man and Idaho Power

By The Times-News
and United Press International

BOISE — The Idaho Public Utilities Commission refused to take sides in a preliminary skirmish Monday between the Idaho Power Co. and a Gooding man.

The dispute between John Koyle and the utility concerns what documents he should release to Idaho Power so it can prepare for the main event, a hearing scheduled for next week.

That hearing concerns a complaint Koyle filed with the PUC last month, in which he said the Boise-based utility refused to purchase power from his proposed hydroelectric project at the juncture of the Big Wood and Little Wood rivers.

Koyle claimed his 1,200-kilowatt project would not be economically feasible at a price of less than 6.7 cents per kilowatt hour. That is the current price at which Idaho Power is required to purchase power from such cogeneration projects. But Idaho Power has asked the PUC to lower that price.

The Koyle-Idaho Power dispute is one of a series of disputes between the utility and would-be developers of private generating projects.

"Idaho Power seems to be almost alone among all the electric utilities we deal with in opposing this cogeneration policy," said PUC member Dick High. "We're getting complaints that they're dragging out the negotiations (with prospective power producers.)"

The PUC has set a price that Idaho Power must pay for power from the private projects. High said that price is less than what it would cost Idaho Power to build new generating plants to produce the power.

But Idaho Power officials contend the price is too high, and that signing contracts at that price with cogenerators will obligate its customers to spend more than is necessary for electricity.

In preparation for a hearing of the dispute between Koyle and Idaho Power next Monday, Idaho Power asked Koyle to submit certain financial documents. Koyle refused. He asked the PUC to side with him.

Idaho Power attorneys claim they need access to feasibility studies and other financial documents to study Koyle's claim that the project would not be worth building if the price is reduced.

PUC President Perry Swisher said Monday that the commissioners have no authority to enter the dispute.

Koyle's attorney agreed to consider removing claims about the feasibility of the project, so that Idaho Power would no longer need the documents.

Idaho Power attorney Robert Koontz said the company also wants information about other project investors, so it can determine whether they would provide a reliable power source.

"If Mr. Koyle has entered into arrangements to sell part of the project, we should know . . . whether they can supply power for 35 years" according to the contract, Koontz said.

But Gary Montgomery, Koyle's attorney, argued that the information is "proprietary in nature."

"We resist having Idaho Power go on a fishing expedition," he said. "Whatever value such information might have to (Idaho Power) is greatly outweighed by (Koyle's) right to confidentiality regarding his financial arrangements."

PUC Commissioner Dick High supports free-market approach

By STEVE LIPSON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Much of Idaho's energy future can be safely trusted to private enterprise, says a man who helps regulate the state's utility monopolies.

Dick High, a member of the Idaho Public Utilities Commission, spoke in his hometown of Twin Falls on Monday to the Society of Rural Appraisers and Farm Managers. In an interview with The Times-News after the speech, High said the free market and its competitive forces promise to supply energy efficiently and, in some cases, help straighten out energy-regulation nightmares.

The PUC has set a price that power companies must pay for privately generated power from "cogenerators."

"Some utilities are actively going out and encouraging cogenerators to build," High says. It reduces the utility's need for funds to build additional generating capacity of its own.

The Idaho Power Co. is one of five power suppliers regulated by the state PUC. And it is the only one that appears not to have embraced cogeneration enthusiastically, High says. Its lack of enthusiasm for power from cogenerators, which company officials say is due to the high price set for this power by the PUC, will be examined in a hearing in January.

"Right now, there are more than 25 hydro projects under study or in process," High says. The energy from these projects would equal the amount produced by Idaho Power's share of a recently constructed coal-fired generating plant. "So it's a very substantial scope," he says.

If a proposed power plant near Milner Dam is built, which would be a joint project by the Twin Falls and North Side canal companies and Idaho Power, it would supply enough revenue to the canal companies to refurbish Milner Dam and both canal systems, High says.

Power generation is not a "natural monopoly," he says, but other functions of a utility are natural monopolies and should remain so. "Generally, local service can't be done as efficiently with competition. Two sets of electric lines across the street from each other from competing companies is not efficient," High says.

He rejects an argument advanced by some economists that monopoly franchises granted to power companies, and the regulated rate of return they are given by state officials, insulate the companies from economic forces that would have signaled them to slow down power-plant construction. The economists argue that utilities have built more capacity than is needed. Customers have been forced to pay for the excess capacity, and all of this could have been avoided if the companies were unregulated and left to compete.

"I'm not sure a free market would have made much difference in electricity," High says. "Nationally, utilities have a reserve capacity of about 35 percent. Industry, which is unregulated, has about 40 percent."

Jones's total spending doubled Williams' in attorney-general race

By BRUCE HAMMOND
Times-News writer

BOISE — Jerome lawyer Jim Jones outspent J.D. Williams by about $6,500 in his successful campaign to become Idaho's next attorney general.

According to the latest campaign-spending disclosures, Jones spent about $48,000 during the general election period. But the attorney general-elect said Monday that the final figures actually will reach about $54,000.

"On our final 'sunshine' (law) disclosure, there was about a $3,000 balance that has since been spent," Jones said. "Then, there should be another $3,000 in salaries that has to be paid."

Williams, the Franklin County prosecutor who ran as the Democratic nominee, says he spent about $47,500 during the election period following the May 5 primary.

Both men's total expenditures are significantly higher, however, when primary-election costs are included.

Jones spent $127,040 throughout his campaign. Williams, who only spent about $15,000 on primary campaigning, had a total expenditure of $62,404.

But Williams faced no primary competition, while Jones had to run a tough — and expensive — campaign against Ada County Prosecutor Jim Harris for the GOP nomination.

Both candidates contributed heavily to their campaigns.

Through donations and loans, Jones says he spent about $50,000 on his own candidacy. Williams says he had to spend about $20,000 of his own money.

"There will be a couple of fund-raisers — one by the governor and one here in Franklin County — but I really expect I'll have to chalk up most of what I loaned to my campaign," Williams says.

Jones says he will spend several months trying to collect donations to pay back some of the loans he made to his campaign.

"But I'm not going to make a lifetime job out of it," he says. "I'll do what I can, and then absorb the rest so that I can concentrate on the work ahead.

"We knew well that a statewide campaign would be expensive, but they always seem to end up costing you more than you ever anticipated," says Jones, who twice before had sought unsuccessfully to unseat Rep. George Hansen in GOP primaries.

JIM JONES
'Borrowed' from himself

But both men say they met most of their early campaign-donation goals.

"We originally anticipated that it would cost between $60,000 and $65,000 to conduct a campaign," Williams says. "And that's where we came in at.

"The only difference is that back when we made that projection, we really believed we'd be running against Harris, not Jones."

"I wish we could have had an extra $10,000 to spend on media advertising in eastern Idaho," Williams says. "If we had, I think we might have turned the race around."

Jones, who spent about $4,000 on media advertising in eastern Idaho, agrees that such a heavy expenditure by Williams might have changed some of the election returns.

"But I don't know if it would have changed the final outcome," Jones says. "Sometimes, you can overkill, and that might have had the reverse effect."

Jones beat Williams statewide by about 5,900 votes.

Council rejects zoning-permit appeal

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — An appeal of a decision by the Twin Falls Planning and Zoning Commission to allow a professional office building at 752 Addison Ave. was turned down Monday night by Twin Falls City Council.

Council upheld the granting of a special-use permit to Marilyn Way, who wants to convert the Addison Avenue property to a professional office. She plans to run a real-estate business there and may rent space to another business.

Rod Fletcher, of 228 Ninth Ave. N., protested the decision, saying Way's real-estate business would create more traffic problems, dust and congestion in the alley that serves as the access to the office.

Kent Taylor, an attorney for Fletcher, said the project's site plan did not provide adequate parking, and the alley was not large enough to handle the extra traffic.

However, Paul Smith, an attorney for Way, told council that seven parking spaces would be provided in compliance with city codes. He also said the real-estate business would not produce "a great deal of coming and going."

A motion to uphold the commission's decision to grant a special-use permit passed 5-2.

Also Monday night, council approved a zoning title amendment to allow the Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce to build a regional tourist information center near the Perrine Bridge. The area is zoned "open space," and a zoning title amendment was needed to allow the center to operate there with a special-use permit.

The special-use permit had been granted earlier by the zoning commission.

In other business:

• Lance Clow, a vice president of Twin Falls Bank and Trust, was appointed to a five-year term as a member of the board of commissioners of the Twin Falls Housing Authority. His term will begin Jan. 11, when the term of Winston Jones expires.

• Council rejected as too high the bids that were submitted for an airport sand storage building. The low bid was $164,000, while only $83,500 had been budgeted for the project. The project engineers were directed to redesign and rebid the project.

• Council authorized the city to relocate a restroom from Drury Park, located Fourth Avenue West and Washington Street, to Highland Park, located at Highland Avenue and Lois Street.

The Drury Park facility is no longer used, whereas the Highland Park facility is old but used by South Park residents.

Relocation costs will be covered by South Park Community Development Project funds.

Jones prepares to become attorney general

By BRUCE HAMMOND
Times-News writer

BOISE — After traveling and vacationing for the past month to recuperate from his unsuccessful campaign to become attorney general, Democrat J.D. Williams has returned to practicing law in Preston.

In contrast, the Jerome rancher-lawyer who won the election, Jim Jones, is frantically completing interviews with potential staff members in preparation for taking office early next year.

"There's an awful lot to do to get ready," Jones said during an informal interview Monday. "I should have all the necessary interviews for new staff done by Friday.

"My wife and I also are trying to close a deal on a house, and hopefully, I'll have my family all moved up here Wednesday."

Jones beat Williams on Nov. 2 by a relatively narrow 5,900-vote margin. And since that evening, the lives of both men have changed drastically.

Perhaps least obvious is a change for Williams, who remains uncertain if he will be satisfied to simply return to his prospering law firm in the southeast corner of the state. He says he still has not decided whether to remain as a lawyer in Preston, to accept a job in state government or a law job in Salt Lake City.

"After the election, I went off by myself," Williams said Monday. "I traveled around Utah a bit. I just had to take time to evaluate where I am and what I want to do."

The options for the 40-year-old remain numerous, however, and Williams says he has no regrets about using $20,000 of his own money for his unsuccessful $62,000 campaign.

"And Jim Jones is a good fellow. I don't knock him there," Williams says. "And I think he's fortunate in taking over an office that has been running so well."

Part of Williams' statement is backed by the fact that only three deputy attorney generals are leaving the office as Jones takes over.

"That is an extremely low turnover rate following an election," says Williams, himself a former deputy attorney general.

Jones agrees. He says he was prepared for a higher number of departures upon his election to the post now held by David Leroy.

"We evaluated everyone in the office, and quite critically, I might say, but we found that everyone was in a job they understood well and were producing at," Jones says.

"I told everyone they were welcome to stay, and I'm very pleased most chose to do so."

There are 55 deputy attorney generals working for the state, but Jones will have direct hiring control over only 19 of those positions. The others are hired and managed by the state agency directors they represent.

Of the 19 operating out of the attorney-general's office, four positions are vacant. Two deputies announced earlier that they would leave for jobs in private practice, while a third recently was named as a new magistrate judge. A fourth position has not been filled for some time, but is funded under the Leroy administration.

"We also only have one secretarial position to fill," Jones says.

Jones also is retaining Larry Harvey as chief deputy attorney general, a position that has allowed Harvey to be the right arm of Leroy's administration.

"I think with our practice of keeping everyone on, and our refusal to open positions to friends or political allies, we are setting the tone for a professional and top-notch legal office," Jones says. "Frankly, I would not be keeping them on if they weren't doing the job."

Although Jones has no plans to expand the staff at this time, he will be lobbying for the Legislature to pass a bill that would bring the other deputy attorney generals under his administration.

"Most of the 55 deputies are under various agencies, like health and welfare, and agriculture," Jones says. "Consolidation like I'm proposing worked in Oregon and has saved a fair amount of money.

"Under consolidation, I will be able to terminate employees who are not producing and can shift work loads around so that an attorney who has free time in one state agency can be utilized in some other department."

This week at CSI

TWIN FALLS — Here's this week's calendar of events at the College of Southern Idaho in Twin Falls that are open to the public.

TUESDAY — The CSI Christmas Ball will be held from 8 p.m. to midnight in the cafeteria, and the public is invited to attend the event, which is free.

WEDNESDAY — International Christmas caroling will be held from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. in the Taylor Administration Building, with carols sung in foreign languages and in sign language.

THURSDAY — A cattlemen's seminar will be held from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. in rooms 117 and 118 of the Shields Building. The seminar will continue in the afternoon from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. in the Expo Center.

Students will be caroling from 7 to 9 p.m. on campus, with refreshments served in the Taylor Administration Building.

FRIDAY — The K and T Steel Basketball Tournament will be held in the CSI gymnasium, with Ricks College playing Casper at 7 p.m., and CSI taking on Nebraska Western at 9 p.m.

SATURDAY — The K and T Steel tournament will continue, with Ricks meeting Nebraska Western at 7 p.m., and CSI playing Casper at 9 p.m.

State personnel exams will be given from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. in Room 205 of the Shields Building.

During the last two weeks of the campaign, contributions flooded into both camps.

Jones's largest contributions in those final weeks came in the form of: a $15,000 loan from his family's cattle business, $500 from the Pollatch Corp., $300 from Hecla Mining Co. and a $2,500 loan from himself.

Williams' largest contributions included: $1,500 from the Salyer Land Co. of California, which uses Williams as its attorney for large ranch holdings in Idaho; a $5,000 loan from his father, J. Bland Williams; $200 from the Idaho Hearing Aid Society; and a $6,500 loan from himself.

High

In the case of natural-gas production, deregulation and an increase in competition are bound to help Idaho, he says. Under the current rules of partial deregulation, prices of gas vary wildly. The most expensive gas is about 45 times as costly as the cheapest.

"It's an awful mess," High says.

Because of the past history of regulation, and the regulations still remaining, prices are going up in spite of a decrease in consumption and a developing oversupply, he says.

"Producers are simply closing off their low-cost producers and selling gas from the high-cost producers," High says.

Idaho is getting a particularly bad "blend" of high-priced Canadian natural gas and high-priced partially deregulated U.S. gas.

"We're paying more than most of the rest of the country," he says. As a result, full deregulation probably would lower the price of gas coming to Idaho.

TWIN FALLS — Armond L. "Bill" Swisher, 77, of Twin Falls, died Sunday afternoon at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center, after a long illness.

Born Aug. 18, 1905, in Grenola, Kan., he moved to Twin Falls as a youth and attended Twin Falls schools. He married Ellen Trenhaile on March 14, 1930, in Elko.

Mr. Swisher drove truck for the Jerome Co-op Creamery and later farmed until his retirement in 1976.

He was a life member of Twin Falls Elks Lodge and belonged to the First Christian Church in Twin Falls.

His wife of Twin Falls survives him.

The funeral will be held Wednesday at 2 p.m. at Reynolds Funeral Chapel in Twin Falls, with the Rev. Warren Chapman of the First Christian Church officiating. Burial will be in Twin Falls Cemetery.

Friends may call at the funeral home today and until the time of the service on Wednesday.

The family suggests that memorial contributions be made to the Heart Fund. They may be left at the funeral home.

Thomas J. VanPatten

Uncle won't prosecute nephew

TWIN FALLS — Criminal charges against a Chubbuck man accused of stealing more than $325,000 from his Twin Falls uncle were dropped Monday.

Judge Melvin Edwards, of the Fifth District Magistrate Court in Twin Falls, said he reluctantly dismissed the grand theft charge against 38-year-old Gregory Leeds after prosecutors moved last week to drop the charges.

Prosecutors said the alleged victim in the case, 72-year-old Oren Boone of Twin Falls, did not want to proceed with prosecution against his nephew.

But Edwards delayed acting on the prosecutors' motion, generally a legal formality, until he received an affidavit to that effect, signed by Boone.

Charges were initially filed against Leeds on Oct. 11. He was accused of removing bonds and 2,005 shares of American Telephone and Telegraph stock — items with a combined value of an estimated $325,000 — from Boone's safe-deposit box, between Sept. 20 and 23.

Police said Leeds had obtained a key to the safe-deposit box, located at the Lynwood branch of Twin Falls Bank and Trust, 1329 Filer Ave. E.

According to a probable-cause statement filed with the court, Leeds allegedly told Boone in early October that the funds had been stolen from his truck while he was traveling between Montana and Pocatello.

In his affidavit, Boone said the money has not been recovered, although he believed some or all of it will be replaced. Boone asked that the charge be dropped because further prosecution would damage family members.

Police arrest Boise 'shopper'

TWIN FALLS — A Boise man was being held Monday in the Twin Falls County Jail, following his arraignment on charges that he used a stolen credit card to buy clothing and lodging during the weekend.

Bail for John Edward Whitlow, 18, of Boise, has been set at $3,000. He has been charged with two counts of forgery.

Twin Falls police arrested him Saturday after he allegedly attempted to purchase $118 worth of merchandise from The Mode Ltd., 705 Blue Lakes Blvd. N., with a stolen credit card.

Police said they were tipped off by store employees.

Police also allege that Whitlow used the same credit card to purchase lodging at Weston's Lamplighter Motel, 906 Blue Lakes Blvd. N. The purchase amounted to $28, police said.

The public defender's office has been appointed to represent him.

Cocaine user receives probation

TWIN FALLS — A 20-year-old Twin Falls man received a two-year withheld judgment Monday after he pleaded guilty, in Fifth District Court, to possession of cocaine.

Larry Dan Fairbanks, 227 Dubois Ave., pleaded guilty to the charge earlier this year.

Monday, his lawyer, Mike Crabtree, sought probation and a withheld judgment for his client. Crabtree noted that Fairbanks had no previous felony convictions and that he had possessed a small amount of the drug at the time of the arrest.

Under Judge Daniel Meehl's decision, Fairbanks will be placed on probation for two years and will be required to pay a $500 fine. Provided the defendant successfully completes probation, the guilty plea will be erased from his record.

Accidents

Shooting mishap hurts Jerome man

JEROME — Melvin Dean Jones, 54, of Route 1, Jerome, accidentally shot himself in the right leg Sunday afternoon while target practicing with his son.

According to Jerome County Sheriff Elza Hall, Jones shot himself just below the right knee, and the bullet lodged near the ankle.

He and a son, Carl Dean Jones, 30, were shooting into a rock pile on their farm about 2 p.m. Sunday when the incident occurred, the sheriff said. The older Jones apparently thought his 22-caliber revolver was empty, and he was holding it in his right hand, with the barrel pointed downward, when it accidentally discharged.

His wife and son took him to St. Benedict's Hospital in Jerome, where he was admitted. He was listed in stable condition Monday evening.

Missed stop sign causes accident

TWIN FALLS — The only victim of a two-car collision Sunday in Twin Falls to require hospitalization was released Monday.

Cort E. Roberts, 18, of 1051 Parkway Drive, Twin Falls, was discharged from Magic Valley Regional Medical Center after spending one night in the hospital. Two other victims of the accident — Catherine Hickman, 33, of Idaho Falls, and Jonathon Bohling, 18, of 1051 Parkway Drive, Twin Falls, were treated and later released from the hospital Sunday.

Twin Falls police say the accident occurred at about 7:30 p.m. at Falls Avenue West and Wendell Street.

Roberts' southbound vehicle failed to stop at a stop sign and struck a westbound vehicle, driven by Jack Lee Hickman, 36, of Idaho Falls, police said.

Roberts has been cited for a stop-sign violation.

Two pickup trucks crash in Minidoka

RUPERT — A Heyburn man demolished his pickup truck and has been cited for driving on the wrong side of the road, after his pickup collided Sunday with another pickup on 300 South.

According to the Minidoka County sheriff's office, Jeff Quinn Billington, 73, was cited early Sunday afternoon after the incident, near 950 West.

Jose Valdez, 68, Ogden, Utah, was the driver of the other vehicle, which received an estimated $1,700 damage.

Three-car collision results in charges

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls woman remained in fair condition at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center on Monday, after an accident that occurred late Friday.

Gwynell Marie Baker, 26, was injured in a three-car accident at Blue Lakes Boulevard, Third Street East and Ninth Avenue East. The accident occurred shortly before 11 p.m.

According to Twin Falls police:

A car driven by Colleen Fay Latham made a left turn from a stop sign on Third Street East, to go north on Blue Lakes. The car collided with one driven by Baker. Baker's car, which had been traveling north, was knocked into the southbound lane of traffic, where it collided with a car driven by Paulette Lee Day of Buhl.

After the collision, the car driven by Latham apparently left the scene of the accident, driving east on Ninth Avenue East. It was stopped a short time later.

Police have charged the 36-year-old Latham with driving while intoxicated and leaving the scene of an injury accident.

Several passengers riding in the cars driven by Baker and Day received injuries that required treatment at the scene by ambulance personnel, but which did not require them to be admitted to the hospital.

IBM sparks stampede

By FRANK W. SLUSSER
United Press International

NEW YORK — Giant IBM paced a buying stampede late Monday, that sent the Dow Jones industrial soaring more than 24 points to within striking distance of its all-time high.

A sharp decline in the key federal funds rates banks charge one another for overnight loans raised hopes other interest charges would fall and helped revive Wall Street's historic rally after a monthlong pause.

The Dow Jones average of 30 blue-chip stocks, down more than five points at the outset after falling 1.75 Friday, climbed 24.29 to 1,055.65, not far from its all-time high of 1,065.49 set Nov. 3.

IBM, a DJIA component, climbed 4¾ to an all-time high of 93 on more than one million shares to place third on the New York Stock Exchange active list. In composite trading on all exchanges, it gained 4½ to 92¾.

Analysts believe the company will raise its dividend payout. Many experts raised their earnings estimates after the computer giant last week announced it was changing its foreign-currency accounting procedures.

IBM's surge also helped the New York Stock Exchange index climb 1.56 to 81.61 and the price of an average share to increase 64 cents. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index rose 3.08 to 141.77.

Advances topped declines 1,014-592 among the 1,939 issues traded.

Big Board volume totaled 83,880,000 shares, up from the 71,540,000 traded Friday. The NYSE transaction tape was five minutes late at the closing bell.

Nearly 40 million shares changed hands in the final two hours as pension funds, under intense pressure to show good results, bought in panic fashion for fear of missing out on the rally.

The National Association of Purchasing Management said its latest survey showed no economic improvement in November. And The Conference Board predicted the gross national product will rise only 2.7 percent next year.

The drop in interbank loan rates raised hopes the Fed will lower its discount rate soon for the seventh time since July to spark economic growth.

Composite volume of NYSE issues listed on all U.S. exchanges and over the counter totaled 98,256,410 shares, up from the 83,699,220 traded Friday.

The American Stock Exchange index rose 1.17 to 335.92 and the price of a share added five cents. Advances topped declines 351-305 among the 858 issues traded. Composite volume totaled 8,196,450 shares compared with 8,197,555 traded Friday.

The National Association of Securities Dealers NASDAQ index of OTC stocks gained 2.13 to an all-time high of 239.29.

On the trading floor, high-technology issues followed the lead of IBM with strong gains.

Texas Instruments climbed 7½ to 147½, Commodore International 6⅝ to 80¼, Digital Equipment 5¾ to 110⅛, Teledyne 5⅞ to 139½, Hewlett Packard 5⅝ to 80¼, General Electric 3⅞ to 95½, Tandy Corp. 4⅞ to 59⅞ and NCR 3½ to 94½.

Exxon was the most active NYSE-listed issue, off ⅛ to 27¾ with a block of 1,040,800 shares at 27½.

Oil stocks generally have been under pressure amid signs OPEC prices may plunge because of disagreement over productivity. Also, Congress is expected to enact an increase in the federal gasoline tax.

Occidental Petroleum (ex-dividend) was the second most active issue, up ½ to 18⅝. The shareholders of Occidental and Cities Service last week approved their merger.

Money market checks next

WASHINGTON (UPI) — As part of a sweeping series of deregulatory actions, federal authorities Monday went beyond earlier deregulation and created a checking account for individuals and non-profit investors that pays money market interest rates.

The Depository Institutions Deregulation Committee surprised the banking and thrift industries by going beyond a money market account ordered by Congress to go into effect Dec. 14 and created another account with even fewer restrictions.

The effect is to establish a checking account that pays interest on deposits comparable to that paid by the popular money market mutual funds. The account, unlimited as to the number of checks that can be drawn or transfers to be ordered, takes effect Jan. 5.

Both the Jan. 5 and Dec. 14 accounts require a $2500 dollar minimum deposit.

But business accounts remain limited to only six checks or transfers a month, not more than three of which can be by telephone.

The committee asked for comments in the next 45 days on eliminating such withdrawal or transaction limitations for businesses.

The committee also added another surprise, reducing the minimum denomination necessary for six-month "money market certificates" from $10,000 to $2,500.

The same minimum was applied to the relatively new 7-to-31 day bank certificates which now have a $20,000 minimum denomination but no interest rate ceiling.

The current temporary interest rate deregulation for the 7-to-31 day account, in effect when the three-month Treasury bill is 9 percent or less, was made a permanent exclusion from interest rate ceilings.

The actions left only bank certificates of from six months to 2½-year maturities with federal interest rate ceilings and the committee asked for comment on ways to eliminate those.

Existing NOW (negotiated order of withdrawal) checking accounts would be largely superceded by the new Dec. 14 and Jan. 5 accounts.

"I'm stunned," a representative of the thrift industry said as he left the DIDC meeting, referring to the lowering of minimum deposits on the six-month money market certificate, one of the most popular financial products of both banks and thrift institutions.

Regulators frown on some promotions

Banks prepare for latest accounts

By GARY KLOTT
United Press International

Banks and savings institutions across the nation are lavishly promoting the Dec. 14 debut of an account they have wanted to offer customers for years — a federally insured equivalent of the popular money market mutual fund.

Federal regulators have claimed some of the promotions were too lavish.

Bankers have been buying full-page newspaper ads and touting cash bonuses of up to $10,000 and interest rates as high as 21 percent to capture some of the $100 billion-plus the new accounts are expected to attract.

For the consumer, the dazzling array of offers is bound to prove both tantalizing and confusing.

Most banks and thrifts are joining the fray, offering those with at least $2,500 to deposit a chance to earn market rates of interest much higher than a passbook account, while still having ready access to the money and limited checking privileges.

Bankers have heralded the account as one of the industry's most important innovations and a means to lure back some of the $230 billion money market funds have attracted in recent years.

Banks are heavily promoting the fact the accounts are federally insured up to $100,000 each, while money funds are not. Since the rules place no interest ceiling on the account, many bankers are posting lofty rates to start in hopes of luring early business.

Perhaps the highest is the 21 percent rate offered by Citizens & Southern Bank in Atlanta.

But the high rates are more of a lure than a barometer of what rate will likely be paid by a bank after mid-January. Federal regulations forbid a bank to guarantee a rate for longer than a month.

Bonuses are another lure. Chase Manhattan Bank in New York advertised a one percent cash bonus — up to $10,000 for someone with $1 million to stash for a year. East New York Savings Bank offered a cash bonus of one-half of one percent. Both, however, were forced to drop them Friday after calls from federal agenices.

A spokesman for the FDIC in Washington said bonuses cannot be offered which require funds to remain on deposit for more than a month.

Those pre-signing with a $5,000 deposit at Home Federal Savings and Loan in San Diego are being offered an interest rate bonus of two points over the average rate for the first six months.

Spokeswoman Monica Wiley said the promotion, which started a month ago with a 3-point bonus, has brought in 15,000 accounts totaling $176 million. Sixty percent of the deposits, she said, represent new money to the thrift.

A UPI survey of offerings across the country showed:

•Initial rates typically range between 9 and 12 percent. By comparison, money funds have been averaging roughly 8.5 percent.

•Most banks set a $2,500 minimum deposit to open an account — that set by regulations. If the average balance dips below $2,500 during a month, banks are not authorized to pay more than the NOW checking account rate.

•While most banks are locking in rates for the first month, there is no indication what future rates will be, other than general assertions they will be competitive with money funds. Some plan to tie rates to money fund averages or 91-day T-bills.

•Nor is there indication yet whether

Business Beat

Merger receives federal OK

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Justice Department Monday cleared the way for Allied Corp. to proceed with its planned $2 billion takeover of the Bendix Corp. and acquire a 39 percent interest in the Martin Marietta Corp.

Allied Chairman Edward Hennessy Jr. said he was "very pleased" by the government's decision and that his company would proceed to buy a majority of Bendix shares and the 39 percent stake in Marietta on Dec. 21.

Allied and Bendix officials also scheduled special stockholders' meetings for Jan. 31 to formally approve the second phase of the Bendix takeover.

Softwood exports up sharply

PORTLAND (UPI) — While the lumber industry has been hurt by the poor economy, exports of softwood logs from the West Coast and Alaska climbed dramatically in the past year.

The September volume of 278.6 million board feet exported was up 74.9 percent from a year earlier and 15.5 percent from August 1982, economist David Darr of the Pacific Northwest Forest and Range Experiment Station said.

Exports from the West Coast totaled 2.1 billion board feet through first nine months of 1982, 30.4 percent more than for the same period of 1981.

Some 189.8 million board feet, or 68.1 percent of the September 1982 total, went to Japan and 20.1 percent was exported to the People's Republic of China.

Standard language endorsed

PALO ALTO, Calif. (UPI) — Thirteen electronics companies endorsed a standardized computer language Monday that will eventually permit computers to communicate with each other regardless of brand.

"It represents a further advance than there has ever been among major players in the computer industry to allow computers to talk to each other," said Hewlett-Packard Co. spokesman Roy Verley.

All new products will have this standard communication capability, Verley said.

The signers of the agreement were Xerox Corp.; Hewlett-Packard Co.; National Semiconductor Corp.; Data General Corp., Digital Equipment Corp.; Fujitsu America Inc.; Intel Corp.; Interlan Inc.; Bridge Communications; Siemens AG; Tektronix; 3COM Corp.; and Ungermann-Bass.

Penney into financial field

NEW YORK (UPI) — J. C. Penney Co. said Monday it has agreed with First Nationwide Savings to launch the sale of a wide line of financial services including insurance in five Penney retail stores in northern California.

If the experiment is successful, the service will be expanded to other stores after 12 to 18 months. First Nationwide is the country's largest savings and loan association.

The financial services in the five Penney stores will be available to credit-card customers. They will include checking accounts, money market funds, retirement accounts, mortages and other loans as well as automobile, homeowners, life, health and other types of insurance.

PUC halts station closing

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Public Utilities Commission has temporarily halted a plan by Burlington Northern to close down its agent station in Moscow so that public comment may be gathered on the proposal.

A PUC spokeswoman said Monday comment will be taken until Dec. 23. At that time, commissioners will determine if a public hearing is necessary, said spokeswoman Dana Howard.

She said the rail company had planned to terminate services at Moscow Dec. 1 because shipping arrangements could be handled by the Burlington Northern agent in nearby Pullman, Wash.

Company officials said they have contacted major customers in Moscow and have received no objections to the planned closure.

But PUC President Perry Swisher, in a letter to Burlington officials, said the threatened pullout is another indication that rail service is retreating from rural Idaho.

Overspending on stereo equipment seems common

Universal Press Syndicate

In today's wonder world of electronic gadgetry — the mystique of home entertainment equipment — what you get is, as usual, less than what you pay for, and what you get is also about twice as much as you need.

If you're a typical consumer, overspending for stereo equipment is as commonplace as overindulging on junk food.

In this world of ohms, RMS, tweeters, woofers, equalizers, flutter and rumbles, what makes receiver "A" (a dead-ringer for receiver "B") $300 more expensive?

The blunt answer: That $300 is far too often buying you, the consumer, power you don't need to achieve distortion-free music at ranges most of you can't even hear. Theoretically, your ear can detect a difference in music with a 1 percent distortion range. But the average buyer can't.

"You can get a perfectly acceptable audio system (receiver, speakers and turntable) in a compact unit for about $200, and a popular brand system with separate components for under $300," says Michael Jaffe, a spokesman for Pacific Stereo, a nationwide chain of 85 home entertainment outlets. "Or you can go up to about $10,000 for equipment. But for the large majority of buyers, the difference in fidelity would not justify the extra expense."

Because aesthetics are so much a part of the world of harmonics and because so many of you simply won't admit you can't really spot the difference between a canary's high note and a squeaking door spring, myths abound in the stereo business. For instance, the more wattage in a receiver, the better ... or the more speakers crammed into a speaker cabinet, the better.

You need a wattage of 10 watts to 25 watts per channel, and for most of us, 30 watts to 50 watts per channel from the receiver are plenty.

If you want to, you can get up to 80 to 100 watts per channel, but you're running into the law of diminishing returns — spending a lot of additional money to get little improvement. And contrary to general belief, hooking on additional speakers doesn't require a big upscaling in wattage.

"When you get four speakers hooked in series in the same receiver," explains Jaffe, "it actually takes less power to drive them since the electrons feeding into the speakers are being pushed back into the receiver and the resistance is less. If you have an 8-ohm speaker and add a second with the same ohm rating, you're ending up with a 4-ohm load on the receiver."

A handy rule of thumb: A 30-watt receiver for a 15-by-15-foot room with two speakers ... 50 watts for a 20-by-20 room with sufficient power for remote speakers.

Basically, the number of speakers in a cabinet does not necessarily determine the quality of sound reproduction. For most buyers a speaker cabinet needs only two speakers in it, a tweeter for the flutes, cymbals and other instruments at the high end of the musical scale and a woofer for the percussions and other instruments at the low end. You can, though, go up to the speaker enclosures at $1,000 a pair, with as many as nine speakers in them.

Now in its 22nd year, Pacific Stereo suggests these tips on shopping for audio equipment:

1) Start building your sound system with the speakers, not the receiver — contrary to the way most of us do it — and then tailor the receiver and turntable to them. What happens in many cases is that you'll settle on a 50-watt receiver that you like and then end up with a couple of speakers that could have been handled just as well by a 30-watt receiver.

2) Stick with well-known brand names with proven track records (companies such as Technics, Sony, Atachi). Frequently, off-brands are pushed simply because that's where the higher markup is.

3) Pick an outlet that provides its own in-house servicing and is a factory-authorized dealer for the brands it carries. Many outlets, when servicing is required, will merely give you, the consumer, the address of the factory where the unit can be returned for repair or replacement.

4) Restrict your purchases to manufacturers that make all of their own components (the salesperson is your guide on this), as opposed to the ones that make their own cabinets but then go out and get the lowest bid they can on a thousand tweeters.

5) Depend on your own ear, not the salesperson's hype. Go into the demonstration room and listen to, say, a $200 system. Then listen to a system costing twice that. If you can tell the difference, then you'll undoubtedly be happier with the more expensive one. If you can't, that tells you something about yourself and your ear, too.

6) Familiarize yourself with prices. Discounts up to 30 percent off list are offered widely by reputable dealers.

7) Don't even bother with a store that won't let you listen at your leisure to the system. You wouldn't think of buying a pair of shoes without trying them on — why should you buy sound equipment without listening to it first? Any dealer who's against listening is selling something not worth listening to.

Basically, most of the baffling range in prices for stereo equipment of seemingly comparable capabilities lies in the extras — automatic rewind

Consumer unit backs product safeguards

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Consumer Federation of America Monday supported regulations requiring tamper-resistant packaging for over-the-counter medications, but cautioned against making the medicines a problem for the elderly or handicapped.

The Food and Drug Administration drafted the regulations requiring tamper-resistant packaging in response to the murder of seven Chicago residents who took cyanide-filled Extra Strength Tylenol capsules.

David Greenberg, legislative director for the consumer agency, said in a statement that the Chicago poisonings illustrates the need for tamper-resistant medicine packaging.

"However," Greenberg said, "tamper-resistant packaging need not be complicated or difficult to open in order to be effective."

Greenberg said any tamper-resistant packages should first be tested on the elderly, adding that "60 percent of senior citizens surveyed in 1978 indicated that they had difficulty opening and closing child-resistant caps."

"Had child-resistant packages simply been tested on elderly and disabled people, this could have been easily avoided," Greenberg said.

Grain futures

CHICAGO (UPI) — Wheat, corn and oats were higher and soybeans irregularly higher at the close Monday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Wheat was up 1½ to 3¼ cents; corn up 2½ to 3½; oats up 2 to ¾; and soybeans up 7 to 2 cents.

A short-covering rally which began about midsession enabled grain and soybean futures to settle near their highs for the day.

The markets had opened firm in line with higher financial instrument and gold values and a weaker dollar. But as precious metals declined, the grains followed suit. Later when the metals recovered, soybeans and the grains tagged along.

Technical considerations were good as Friday's losses were not continued.

Corn futures received underlying support on rumors of a new government setaside program. That could take more corn off the market, traders said.

Country movement was light due to heavy rains and flooding late last week and during the weekend, cash merchandisers said. Some elevators along the Illinois River remained closed Monday because of high water levels.

The outside markets were mixed.

First Security tops the money market funds with the all new money master™ account*

Now, earn money market fund rates with insured safety!

With our Money Master Account you'll be able to make withdrawals by mail or messenger, or at a HandiBank. Or at any office of First Security. Your money will always be working for you, rather than be in a money market fund in some other part of the country.

More importantly, you get the vital extras of an investment that is insured to $100,000 by the FDIC, and backed by the management experience of the $4 billion First Security Corporation. Final federal regulations should be completed December 14. On that date we invite you to bring your money market funds back home and place them in a Money Master Account at First Security. The minimum deposit is $2,500. There is no maximum.

Plan now to start enjoying the convenience, earnings, insured safety and liquidity of a First Security Money Master Account!

Court turns down Vietnamese banker's claim

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court spurned efforts Monday by a Vietnamese bank officer — who fled the Southeast Asian nation as the Communists rolled toward Saigon — to claim money owed his bank.

The justices refused to hear an appeal by Tran Qui Than, who argues the Treasury Department is freezing assets of Vietnamese refugees for use as a bargaining chip in future negotiations between the United States and Vietnam.

Tran Qui Than left Saigon on April 25, 1975, five days before North Vietnamese forces overran the capital and ended the Vietnam War. He had been an officer and largest shareholder in Dong Phuong Bank.

The private bank had been handling payments to local Vietnamese contractors who worked for the U.S. military. More than $220,000 was due when the bank was confiscated following the fall of Saigon.

Before the evacuation, Than said, the bank's board of directors decided its members who escaped the country could use the bank's assets abroad.

When he arrived in the United States, he sought payment of the money owed the bank. The Army refused to pay without a license from the secretary of the Treasury, required under the Foreign Assets Control Regulations.

Those regulations came into play when the U.S. government invoked the Trading with the Enemy Act, barring transfers or payments of any property or currency with Vietnam.

In denying the request in 1977, federal officials said foreign assets regulations prohibited all such transactions involving Vietnamese nationals.

Than then sued in California, seeking a ruling he was not a "designated national" who fell under the regulations.

A federal district court ruled against him and the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals upheld the decision, which barred him from collecting the money.

The court noted that any government in Vietnam might reasonably "assert an interest in the bank's assets held in this country and that the United States could use the blocked funds as a diplomatic negotiating tool."

In other business-related action Monday, the justices:

•Refused to upset a injunction temporarily barring three top Grumman Corp. executives, who also serve as trustees of their employees' pension fund, from sinking any more pension fund money into company stock.

•Crossed off its docket a case charging Gillette Co. with breach of contract for failure to deliver a $7.95 cigarette lighter offered as a promotion.

and memory-selection on tape decks, preset capabilities on AM-FM receivers, all the rest.

The irony is, though, that as the audio end of the home entertainment business gets more and more complex in its extra features, the video end of the business — notably videotape recorders — is moving in the opposite direction, to easier-to-operate models as a means of offsetting high price tags (up to $1,500).

Instead of 14-day programmable models, for instance, "they're offering one-to-three days programmable," Jaffe says, "as well as stop/start remote control — no fast rewind, back-up, freeze-frame or other non-essential features." With manufacturers making them less, instead of more, complicated, you can now pick up a good VCR for about $450.

Both in audio and video home entertainment equipment, price should be determined on the basis of what you really want as features.

OSHA under new attack in Congress

By DON PHILLIPS
United Press International

WASHINGTON — The Occupational Safety and Health Administration, after living safely out of the limelight for months, is under new attack on Capitol Hill.

Budget cutbacks and new restrictions on the powers of the agency, which raised hackles during the Carter administration for its strict health and safety rules, are popping up in both the House and Senate as the Labor Department's appropriations bill works its way through Congress.

This little-noticed battle is a classic example of how things are not always as they seem in the bureaucracy and how liberal universities, private industry and other outside sources do all the work on standards, with OSHA's own 91-member staff reviewing their work and issuing the standards.

OSHA says if the new restrictions become law, its power to set standards for use of the fumigant EDB, for protection of migrant workers and a variety of other issues would be weakened. In fact, no standards could be issued for a full year, an agency spokesman said.

The restrictive language included by the House Appropriations Committee was deleted on the House floor, but it may reappear either in the bill or in a continuing resolution as the lame-duck session draws to a close. A Senate subcommittee cut OSHA's budget $4 million but did not include the restrictions, although an effort may be made in the full Senate Appropriations Committee today or on the Senate floor.

OSHA's chief antagonist is Rep. David Obey, D-Wis., a liberal who has supported OSHA and its regulations for years.

In effect, Obey has told OSHA he would rather see no rules at all than to see action taken by the current head of OSHA, Thorne Auchter. An Obey spokesman said Auchter is doing more harm than good.

"Most of what they are doing is a flat waste of money," said the Obey spokesman. "They have not come up with any standards since Mr. Auchter became secretary. The money he has spent has been to weaken the current 23 standards."

In earlier hearings, said the spokesman, "it was clear that his (Auchter's) only interest was a destructive one."

A conservative congressmen, Rep. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, emerged as OSHA's protector. Craig offered the amendment restoring OSHA's powers and funds, acting when Obey was busy talking with incoming freshman House members and could not be on the floor.

Gasoline use, price both drop

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Oil expert Dan Lundberg says six months of declining gasoline consumption by motorists — a nationwide drop of 15 billion gallons this year — is causing the steady price drop at the pump.

Gas prices have fallen nearly a penny a gallon in the past two weeks, Lundberg said after analyzing his latest nationwide survey of service stations.

"A price decline that began shortly after the Fourth of July weekend has continued up to the present time," he said. "Back in July, the average overall price of gasoline was $1.29.43 and now it, on a national basis including all taxes, is $1.23.68."

Lundberg attributed the fall in prices to increased auto efficiency, greater conservation and "a strong measure of austerity" on the part of consumers.

"You usually plan your driving these days because it's just too expensive to tool around," Lundberg noted.

He projected gas consumption in the U.S. this year will close at 100.4 billion gallons, down 15 billion from the record 115.4 billion gallons consumed in 1978, a year before the 1979 oil shock and dramatic price increases.

Lundberg said in the past two weeks, the average price of gasoline has fallen .97 cent, outpacing the recent decline of about a penny and a quarter a month.

He said the Dec. 19 Vienna meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries would be critical to the price picture.

"If the OPEC nations fail to restrain some of their excess production, this means they will not be able to hold their existing prices firm," Lundberg said.

Money

most banks will be adjusting rates weekly, monthly or daily.

•In the advertising deluge, some banks are promoting other accounts that readers might confuse for the new account. An endless variety of names have been announced for the new accounts.

Bankers hope the new account money comes from money market funds or higher-yielding bank certificates.

If it comes from customers simply shifting money from a passbook account, it will be costly to bankers because they will be paying much higher interest for the same money. It could even drive some out of business.

Some bankers are considering fees to offset the costs. But that could make the account less competitive with money funds and other banks.

Wall Street economist Albert Wojnilower expects the accounts to raise "permanently the floor of interest rates in this country." However, analysts don't foresee money funds in jeopardy of annihilation.

"I think the new account is viewed as a much bigger threat than reality suggests," said William Donoghue, a leading money fund watcher.

Based on a survey of 400 consumers, Richard Ross, vice president of the Chicago-based research firm Market Facts, predicts the new accounts will attract a total $122 billion — $22 billion coming from money funds, $65 billion from lower-rate bank accounts, and the rest from other investments.

The survey found one of four bank customers interested in the account.

Donoghue contends the insurance feature of the bank account won't prove that much of an attraction. He also notes that more than 100 money funds require a minimum deposit of $1,000 or less compared to the $2,500 at banks.

And while the bank account allows a customer to write only three checks a month, money funds have no limit, although typically money funds set a minimum check denomination of $500.

Banks may permit a depositor to make up to three pre-authorized transfers a month to a third party for bill paying and unlimited withdrawals. Bankers also intend to emphasize convenience.

Frito-Lay co-founder dies at age 73

DALLAS (UPI) — Herman W. Lay, co-founder of Frito-Lay Inc. and later chairman of its parent corporation, Pepsico, died Monday at Baylor Hospital after a brief illness. He was 73.

A native of Charlotte, N.C., Lay became a distributor for Atlanta-based Georgia Snack Food Co. in Nashville, Tenn., in 1932. Eight years later he purchased the company and founded H.W. Lay and Co.

Sales of Lay potato chips steadily grew and in 1961 H.W. Lay merged with the Frito Co. in Dallas to form Frito-Lay Inc.

In 1964, Lay became chairman of the board of the company which merged a year later with the Pepsi Cola Co. to form Pepsico Inc. Lay was elected chairman of the board of Pepsico in 1971 and retained that position until his retirement in 1980.

Football loss had winning season

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I would like to express a big "thank you" for the football strike!

Wasn't it wonderful to have our men free to be with us this fall? Not to mention the money saved from the bets at the office?

I certainly enjoyed the strike while it lasted!

— MINNESOTA WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Welcome to a very large club of women whose men returned to them during the football strike. It's been said, "We never appreciate what we've lost until after it's gone." To which can be added, "Nor realize how little we needed it in the first place."

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend, John (fake name), rents a house from his parents. They own several, and John pays rent like everyone else.

Last Sunday while I was there, John's mother dropped in. The instant John stepped outside to look at something, she started opening his closets and drawers. I couldn't believe my eyes! John is 25, independent and honest.

After she left, I told John about it and he said, "She probably thinks we're living together." (We aren't.)

Then I told John that since other tenants get a 24-hour notice of inspection, he should demand it, too. He disagreed.

Please give John some advice on how to nip this in the bud before it gets worse.

— JOHN'S GIRL

DEAR GIRL: John didn't ask for any advice, but since you wrote, I assume you need some. John's mother was not making an "inspection tour" as a homeowner, so the 24-hour notice rule doesn't apply here.

I agree that John's mother was out of line to snoop in John's closets and drawers, but now that he's aware of it, if he doesn't call her on it, let it go.

DEAR ABBY: My husband is a partner in a very successful company. He runs the field work, and the other three run the office. They have a well-paid secretary-receptionist.

The problem: If someone tries to contact the office between 12 and 1 p.m., there is no one there — everyone is out to lunch! I get a lot of phone calls (we are the only ones with a listed phone) when customers can't reach the office.

I contend that a business should have someone there to answer the phone at all times during the business day. It would be different if this were an occasional occurrence, but it happens almost every day. I think that with four people in the office, lunchtime should be staggered so that someone is always there. Your comments, please.

— ANNOYED

DEAR ANNOYED: I agree, lunchtime should be staggered so you wouldn't be bothered at home. However, a "very successful business" should be able to afford an answering machine to take calls 24 hours a day.

You don't mention the name (or size) of the town, but it must be a very small town with no competition.

CONFIDENTIAL TO HAD IT UP TO HERE IN WINNETKA, ILL.: Move on. A good artist knows when a painting is finished.

DEAR ABBY: A correspondent from Durango, Colo., wrote: "The most effective way to deal with obscene phone calls is to keep a referee's whistle near the phone. One sharp blast and the caller hangs up, never to call again."

Poor suggestion. One sharp blast could do serious eardrum damage. "Whistle Blower" errs again when he says the caller would not call again. He'd call all right, after getting a whistle of his own.

— A.K. IN MO.

DEAR A.K.: Several readers were quick to blow the whistle on "Durango Whistle Blower" for the reason you pointed out. One even cited a case where the obscene phone caller sued his victim for permanently damaging his eardrum — and won!

Allergy can affect smell

By LAWRENCE LAMB, M.D.
Newspaper Enterprise Association

DEAR DR. LAMB — My grandmother is 85 years old. Last year she lost her sense of smell. This year she has lost her sense of taste. Seasoned or spicy food tastes bitter. This makes eating very unpleasant and she does not eat enough.

My grandmother has an allergy that makes her eyes itch. She is now itching around her mouth and nostrils. Could an allergy cause her to lose her sense of taste and smell?

DEAR READER — Loss of taste or smell or both is much more common than you might realize, judging from the large number of letters about these problems. And I'm sorry to say there are limited things that can be done. But such findings should never be ignored as they can be an important symptom of significant problems.

A good place to start with a loss of smell is to see an ear, nose and throat specialist if your family doctor cannot help you. Local changes in the nose can affect a person's ability to smell. A common cold is a good example of the problem. Your grandmother's allergy may be associated with nasal blockage that affects her ability to smell.

Ultimately all information from the special senses must arrive at the brain before your conscious mind is aware of the stimulus. To illustrate, a person may be blind because special areas of the brain that perceive signals from the eye are damaged. The same is true with smell. The cells here are in the frontal lobe and sometimes a brain tumor may cause its first symptoms by causing a loss of smell.

Other diseases that damage the frontal lobes may also cause a loss of smell, and so can injuries. That is why if there is nothing found from a nose examination it is good to see a neurologist.

Loss of taste has a lot in common with loss of smell but we know more about it. Zinc deficiencies are one cause, and the deficiency can be caused by a recent virus infection or a tumor that absorbs zinc. And, not eating or problems in absorbing zinc may lead to a zinc deficiency.

The causes and what we know about the management of these frustrating conditions are discussed in more detail in The Health Letter 20-4, Taste and Smell, which I am sending you. Others can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My son is a respiratory therapist and was exposed to a patient with undiagnosed tuberculosis. About six months later he had a positive skin test but a negative chest X-ray. He is on INH for a year and has been told he will have no further problems till his later life.

Can he pass TB to others? Will excessively long work hours aggravate his condition? He is very young with a wife and baby. I am extremely concerned and would appreciate any information you can give.

DEAR READER — It usually takes six to eight weeks for the body to develop enough of an immune reaction to cause a positive skin reaction. The disease will still be so contained in his body that the chest X-ray will be negative. It will probably always be negative.

Yulebook tells how to celebrate Christmas

By SANDY BATTIN
Knight-Ridder Newspapers

DULUTH, Minn. — A friend whose children were grown and away from home told Holly Ebel that her family had never done anything special for Christmas and she regretted it.

"They didn't have any traditions and that surprised me," Ebel said. If there was one thing of which the Ebel family has plenty, it is traditions.

Then Ebel's newly divorced sister-in-law confided that she was concerned about what Christmas was going to be like now that she was single.

That was when the mother of three sons from Hopkins, Minn., decided she would write a book giving people ideas how to really celebrate Christmas.

"I bought a notebook and took notes through the holiday," she recalled. "It seemed like there were two Holly Ebels — one me doing the preparations and a me who hopped out of myself as an observer.

"In January, there were tons of snow and so I was housebound. ... I had to have the copy done by the end of February."

She found an artist, did her own lay-out and her book, "Christmas in the Air: A New-Fashioned Book for an Old-Fashioned Christmas," was published under her own HollyDay imprint by August.

A major bookstore has featured the book in its catalog at $6.95 and she's sold 10,000 copies. It's also available for $8.25 through HollyDay Books, P.O. Box 259, Hopkins, Minn. 55343.

The secret of Ebel's success seems to be that she loves Christmas. And she describes some wonderful proceedings.

The holiday usually starts for the Ebels the first Sunday in Advent, when her family gathers with others at their church to make wreaths. Each Sunday through Christmas, Ebel, her husband David and their sons Greg, 14, Jon, 12, and Kip, 9, light a candle, read Bible verses, sing carols and talk about Christmases past.

On the first Saturday night in December, the family sits around the table and writes letters to Santa Claus. Each child is limited to three gift wishes. "That came from my German parents," Ebel explained.

That evening, each boy puts his letter in a shoe outside their bedroom door and one of Santa's helpers takes it and leaves a piece of candy and an Advent calendar.

The following weekend, the family goes out with friends to cut their own Christmas tree.

"I think traditions are important because they give children a sense of family, something to take with them when they leave. Families are so fractured today that I think anything special you can do together is going to act like a glue when your kids go out on their own," Ebel said.

"In traditions, you have to be careful you don't put yourself in a straitjacket. Traditions can bend. They're not brittle and they're not going to break.

"You shouldn't be bound by what other people are doing. Make your own customs, keep it manageable. I guess I have found the simple things preserve us the best."

Beginning at Thanksgiving, Ebel takes out an old ledger and writes about the family's holidays. "It turns out to be a history of the family. This year, my husband's father died a few days before Thanksgiving, so I'll say Thanksgiving was a little different this year," she said. "As we buy gifts, we put that down, and the batches of cookies — what was good and what was bad. And I always write that I should start earlier, start earlier, get organized."

Another favorite family tradition is drawing names for secret pals, who do nice things, ranging from making their pal's bed to leaving him or her a piece of candy in a mitten.

"One year my husband went to the kids' school and gave a piece of candy to the teacher and she stuck it in my son's desk with a note. My little boy didn't know what had happened," Ebel said.

Christmas can be such a busy time and we find ourselves with too much to do. That's especially true if birthdays and anniversaries fall within a couple weeks of the holiday.

Ebel's family celebrates one son's birthday in March, on his name day, rather than on Dec. 22. And the Ebels' Dec. 23 anniversary is celebrated earlier in the year, on the day they first met.

Don't give up your holiday spirit just because Christmas is over. "We keep playing music and we plan something special," Ebel said. "Everybody's home and we can do lots of fun things. We go skiing and we write our thank-yous together."

Sometimes, the holidays aren't going to be the same as usual and you should recognize that. Ebels' father-in-law's death is an example.

"It is not going to be the same and you can't pretend," Ebel said. "I know one family who didn't have Christmas one year. They just couldn't do it. I know another who went away for the holidays. If your grief is paralyzing, I think maybe you should pass. But children can be a wonderful help. If you have little children around, that's the spirit of Christmas."

If you're alone on Christmas, help someone in need. "Go to a nursing home and help. Give someone a day off to have time with their family," she said.

FDA okays 5 shampoo ingredients

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Food and Drug Administration panel has good news for Americans scratching their heads over which dandruff shampoo to buy: many of them include ingredients that work.

After a yearlong study, the panel found five ingredients common in dandruff shampoos are safe and effective in controlling dandruff, severe dandruff and psoriasis. None worked for cradle cap, a temporary infant form of dandruff.

The ingredients, among 32 studied, are salicylic acid, pyrithione zinc, sulfur, coal tar and selenium sulfid. The panel recommended brands made from those ingredients be allowed to advertise relief of certain dandruff symptoms.

The panel looked into ingredients as part of a large FDA review of safety, effectiveness and labeling of all over-the-counter products. It published its report in Friday's Federal Register and asked for public comment through March 3. The FDA will then write a final rule.

More than two-thirds of all Americans report having some dandruff, although only 18 percent say it is moderately severe or worse. Americans spent $200 million last year on shampoos to combat it, according to industry figures.

Most of the approved ingredients are apparently in the common brands of shampoo. Among the brands that include one or more of the five approved ingredients are Head and Shoulders, Breck One, Danex, Zincon, Ionil, Selsun Blue, pHisoDan, Sebulex, Sebutone, and Tegrin, according to industry information.

Another FDA panel has classified coal tar as unsafe for treating fungus skin infections because it remains on the skin. But for shampooing purposes, the dandruff panel said, it is safe because it does not remain long on the scalp and comes in contact only with thick skin.

Dandruff occurs when dead skin cells shed faster than normal. A standard of shampoo effectiveness is "the ability to permeate the skin barrier and control this excessive shedding or flaking," the panel said.

"Come good times or bad, there is always a market for things nobody needs." — Kin Hubbard.

There were two obvious finesses available in the play of today's exciting slam. Instead of trying both, declarer should take only the one he really needs.

North's four club cue bid describes a very good one no trump opening, excellent heart support and a club control (the ace). Control showing cue bids in spades and diamond follow and South settles in a small slam.

West leads the diamond five and the crucial point in play is at hand. Should declarer try the diamond finesse? If he does, East wins and returns a trump which South wins. Trumps are drawn and South plays his space ace and a spade to dummy's 10. The ace and a diamond ruff allow another successful spade finesse, but that's not good enough. South discards one club but he cannot avoid a losing club for one down.

Had the diamond finesse won, would that have cinched the slam? Not at all. The spade finesse was also needed to keep from losing a spade and one club.

The key to the slam lies with refusing a finesse one does not need. Win the diamond ace at trick one and draw trumps. Next cash the spade ace and finesse against West (if East holds the queen and three others, the finesse against East does no good). When the second spade finesse wins, declarer discards a diamond on dummy's spade king and declarer surrenders only one club trick.

Player reps vote 19-9 to approve strike deal

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Union representatives of the 28 NFL teams have voted 19-9 to recommend ratification of the tentative collective bargaining agreement reached Nov. 16 with league owners that ended the 57-day pro football strike.

The NFL Players Association announced the results Monday after conducting a telephone poll of the player representatives over the past three days.

The NFL's 1,500 union members will vote Wednesday on the agreement, after they have been informed of the results of the player representatives' non-binding vote. The players can vote to ratify the pact, reject it or abstain, but all must sign their names to the ballots, according to union President Gene Upshaw.

Ed Garvey, the NFLPA's executive director, said, "I still don't know what the players will do." But he added the player representatives probably would not have recommended ratification if not for last-minute agreements reached Friday.

Garvey said, "The contract which we are submitting to the members for ratification is substantially improved" over the Nov. 16 tentative agreement. He said one improvement provided protection for players if the NFL expands beyond a 16-game season. The agreement also said the 1983 draft must be held in May, and the union must receive copies of all player contracts within 30 days, and all new contracts within 10 days.

If the players vote not to ratify the contract, league owners could revert to their collective bargaining agreement that expired last July, according to NFL Management Council spokesman Jim Miller.

Miller said the players could lose a substantial amount of money if they reject the contract and that the 16-team playoff format leading to the Super Bowl would not be played. He said the NFL would have to go back to the old system where only 12 teams qualify for the playoffs, necessitating formulating a system to determine which teams would participate because of the strike-shortened season.

Garvey has said he would not advocate another strike if the proposal is rejected.

The vote among player representatives was delayed last week while Garvey and chief NFL negotiator Jack Donlan put the final touches on the agreement.

Following the sessions with Donlan, Garvey discussed the agreement with former Pittsburgh Steeler Paul Martha, who served as a mediator during the final days of the strike, and said both sides finally have agreed "on all outstanding bargaining issues. There will be no further negotiations."

Garvey said the improvements grew out of these sessions. He also said NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle was "helpful in resolving some of the outstanding issues."

The agreement reportedly is worth $1.6 billion over four years and gives the players some rights they did not previously have, such as access to their medical records.

The union battled to the end to get guarantees that the regular season schedule will not be extended beyond the current 16 games without further negotiations. Management has agreed that is a working condition and any changes must be negotiated with the union.

Martha, legal counsel for the San Francisco 49ers, served as a go-between near the end of the first in-season strike in the 63-year history of the NFL. The strike began on Sept. 21 following the second week of regular-season play and forced cancellation of eight weeks of activity.

Todd, Walker propel Jets past Detroit

PONTIAC, Mich. (UPI) — Richard Todd and Wesley Walker said they caught the Detroit Lions in a lot of man-to-man defense. What it looked like was more like man-to-mouse.

Todd and Walker connected on a club record-equalling three touchdowns Monday night to give the New York Jets a 28-13 victory over the Detroit Lions, their fourth straight win. New York is 4-1 while Detroit is 2-3, with all three losses in post-strike play.

"We didn't have any intentions of picking on any one individual," said Walker, who caught touchdown passes of 56, 41 and 19 yards and wound up with five catches for 164 yards. Walker also caught six passes for 177 yards against Detroit when the teams last met in 1979.

"In the films we looked at all week," Walker said, "Wayne Smith showed us a certain way he played — yet he did exactly the opposite in the game.

"We seemed to catch them in the right defense at the right time and took advantage of them. The first two touchdowns were just fly patterns and the third one was a corner (pattern). And when I cut to the corner, no one was there."

"Our receivers are as good as anybody in the league," Todd said. "We got them in the right defense at the right time. We knew they played a lot of man-to-man. We hoped to capitalize on it — and we did."

"I want to make on thing clear," Detroit Coach Monte Clark said. "I'll take the blame. My job is to get us ready and to win, and we didn't do it.

"It's disappointing, I must say. I'm usually not as optimistic as I was (before the game). I felt when we came in, we had laid it out all very clearly. We had great meetings and it seemed like everybody was ready. But we didn't do it."

The Lions got field goals of 31 and 22 yards from Eddle Murray but only one touchdown — the only one Detroit's offense has generated in the last 11 quarters — when Gary Danielson surprised the Jets' defense by throwing a 48-yarder to wide receiver Mark Nichols in the first play of a series.

New York fumbled on its first possession of the game and Detroit turned it into Murray's 31-yard field goal to take a 3-0 lead just 4:12 into the contest.

However, two series later, with Walker making catches of 30 and 18 yards, Todd marched the Jets 63 yards and gave the ball to Dwayne Crutchfield on the one. Crutchfield swept left end and ran over right cornerback James Hunter to give New York a 7-3 lead.

Todd, who completed 11 of his first 15 passes and hit 10 in a row as he ran his first half statistics to 17-for-23 and 295 yards, threw his first scoring pass to Walker for 56 yards, who evaded defender Wayne Smith.

The unlucky Smith was victimized by a touchdown on New York's next possession after three straight running plays set him up for Walker's 41-yard touchdown reception which made it 21-3 with 9:30 left in the first half.

Detroit held New York without a first down in the third quarter and pulled within eight points, 21-13, on Nichols' touchdown reception and Murray's 22-yard field goal, which came with 11:03 left.

However, in between, the Jets defense made a key play after Smith sacked Todd on a blitz and Lions defensive end Dave Pureifory recovered on the New York 1.

One play gained nothing, but Danielson made a bad handoff to Billy Sims on a dive play to cause a fumble and New York safety Ken Schroy came up with the ball to save a touchdown.

Despite this sack by Detroit's Stan White, Jet QB Richard Todd recovered to throw for 3 TDs

Devils top cage ratings in A-4

By United Press International

Idaho high school basketball coaches Monday returned Meridian to the top of their poll for boys play in A-1, and retained Madison as their premier choice in A-2 despite a Bobcat loss last week to Idaho Falls.

Coaches, in a survey conducted by UPI, picked Fruitland as the top squad in A-3 play, while Murtaugh dominated the A-4 roster.

Meridian, 2-0, repeated as the coaches' selection in Idaho's major high-school division. It was followed by Twin Falls, 1-0; Coeur d'Alene, 2-0; Caldwell, 2-0; and Idaho Falls, 1-1.

Boise, ranked No. 4 in last week's preseason survey, dropped from the rankings.

In A-2 competition, Madison, 1-1, retained its spot at the top of the listing. The Bobcats dropped a contest last Friday, 53-54, to the A-1's Idaho Falls, but rebounded with a 54-44 victory the next night over Bonneville.

The Bobcats were followed on the coaches' list by Soda Springs, 1-0. St. Maries and Jerome, both 2-0, tied for the No. 3 spot, followed by Rigby, 1-1.

Moscow, No. 2 last week, did not make this week's top five.

Fruitland, 1-0, captured the top spot in A-3 play on the virtue of a 69-61 win Friday over Payette. The Grizzlies were trailed by Parma, 1-0; Kimberly, 2-0; Gooding, 0-2; and Malad, 2-0.

Kamiah and Prairie, which tied for the No. 5 post last week, were dropped from the rankings.

And in the A-4 division, the nod for No. 1 went to Murtaugh, 3-0. The Red Devils edged Mackay, 1-1. The No. 3 spot was held by Mullan, 1-1, followed by Greenleaf Friends, 0-1, and Nez Perce, 1-1.

Cascade fell out of the top five.

'Player to be named later' could be key

Boston trades Lansford for A's Armas in five-player swap

HONOLULU (UPI) — Carney Lansford, the 1981 American League batting champion, was dealt by the Boston Red Sox to the Oakland A's for outfielder Tony Armas in a five-player transaction Monday that opened the trading market at the baseball meetings.

As part of the deal, the Red Sox also received catcher-first baseman Jeff Newman and Oakland obtained first baseman-outfielder Garry Hancock and a player to be named.

The player to be named is expected to be an important one since the A's were reluctant to part with the hard-hitting Armas.

Lansford, a 25-year-old third baseman, hit .301 in 128 games last season and is considered one of the best all-around players in the major leagues. However, he can become a free agent after next season. The Red Sox said they were not prepared to pay him the $1.2 million per year he is reportedly seeking.

More baseball—D4

Lansford, who led the AL in batting in the strike-torn 1981 season with a .336 average, becomes the third big name player dealt by the Red Sox at the winter meetings in the last two years because the club could not reach agreement on a new contract.

At the 1980 meetings, the Red Sox traded outfielder Fred Lynn and Rick Burleson to California under similar circumstances. Ironically, the Red Sox acquired Lansford in the Burleson deal.

In obtaining Armas, the Red Sox acquired one of the major league's power hitters and one of the best defensive outfielders. Armas, 29, has hit 85 homers over the last three seasons, including 28 this past season despite missing 24 games with injuries. Armas hit 35 homers and drove in 109 runs in 1980.

Newman, 34, hit .199 in 72 games in 1982. During his seven-year major league career he has caught, played first and third base. He was a member of the AL All-Star team and hit 22 home runs with 71 RBI in 1979.

Hancock was used sparingly by the Red Sox last season, appearing in only 11 games and failing to get a hit in 14 at-bats.

Bill Rigney, assistant to the president of the Oakland A's, realized the power Armas has given Okland.

"But we feel we needed an infielder" he said. "We gave up one of the premier outfielders for one of the top five players in the game. This is the first step in re-structuring the Oakland A's. We acquired a player not only to build with, but to build around."

Rigney said the trading of Armas would open a spot in the outfield for highly regarded Mike Davis. Davis, 23, hit .400 for the A's in 23 games at the end of the season after spending most of the year with the Tacoma farm club in the Pacific Coast League.

"Davis is a player that has to play," said Rigney.

Boston manager Ralph Houk said that he would play Armas in center field, insert Wade Boggs at third base, and go with Dave Stapleton as his regular first baseman.

"We came here looking for a power hitting, right-handed hitter and an outstanding pitcher," Houk said.

Earlier, the Milwaukee Brewers announced they had re-signed free-agent pitcher Bob McClure to a multi-year contract.

Walker, naturally, a unanimous pick for UPI All-America

NEW YORK (UPI) — Junior running back Herschel Walker, the player most responsible for leading top-ranked Georgia to within one victory of its second national championship in three seasons, was a unanimous selection Monday to UPI's 1982 All America college football team.

Walker, making the team for the third staright year, heads an offensive unit which includes Stanford quarterback John Elway and running backs Eric Dickerson of Southern Methodist and Mike Rozier of Nebraska.

Walker is one of two Bulldogs named to the first team. Terry Hoage, the nation's top pass interceptor with 12, led the voting for defensive backs, while Rozier is joined by his key blocker, center Dave Rimington, the two-time winner of the Outland Trophy.

In balloting by 120 sports writers and sportscasters from around the country, Walker was the only unanimous selection among the 24 first-team players, while Rimington, who also made the team last year, was named on 111 ballots.

JOHN ELWAY
Quarterback on first team

Michigan's acrobatic wide receiver, Anthony Carter, also became a two-time All America as the versatile senior, who holds nearly every school receiving and scoring record, was named on 93 ballots. Brigham Young junior Gordon Hudson, the nation's No. 4 pass catcher, is the tight end.

Joining Rimington on the front line are Southern California's Don Mosebar and Pittsburgh's Jimbo Covert at the tackles and Southern California's Bruce Matthews and Arkansas' Steve Korte at the guards.

Middle guard George Achica gave Southern California three players on the first team, as the 6-foot-5, 260 senior was named on 59 ballots.

Arkansas' Billy Ray Smith became a two-time All America as he was named the top defensive end on 84 ballots. Vernon Maxwell of Arizona State is the other end, with Mike Pitts of Alabama and Rick Bryan of Oklahoma at the tackles.

The linebackers are Darryl Talley of West Virginia, the No. 1 vote-getter at his position with 75, Marcus Marek of Ohio State and Ricky Hunley of Arizona.

Along with Hoage in the secondary are Terry Kinard of Clemson and Mike Richardson of Arizona State.

Washington's Chuck Nelson, who set an NCAA record for consecutive fields goals and hit 25-of-26 this season, is the kicker, and Vanderbilt's Jim Arnold, who averaged 45.8 yards a kick, iss the punter.

Walker, 6-foot-2 and 220 pounds, was the nation's second-leading rusher with 1,752 yards. His magical runs have made him the most dominant player in college the last three years.

Elway failed to make honorable mention last season but this year, the senior ranked third in the nation in passing efficiency and threw for 3,242 yards and 24 touchdowns.

Dickerson led SMU to a 10-0-1 season and a berth in the Cotton Bowl as the Southwest Conference champion. The senior gained 1,617 yards and had a 7.0-yard per carry average.

The first team consists of four repeaters from 1981 — Carter, Rimington, Walker and Smith. Six juniors made the team as juniors — Hudson, Walker, Rozier, Bryan, Hunley and Hoage. The rest are seniors.

UCLA quarterback Tom Ramsey, the No. 1-rated passer, heads the second team, with Kenny Jackson of Penn State at wide receiver and Allama Matthews of Vanderbilt at tight end.

Oklahoma State's Ernest Anderson, who led the nation with 1,877 yards, is at one running back spot, with Penn State's Curt Warner and Ohio State's Tim Spencer also making the second team.

The second team offensive line consists of Maceo Fuller of Houston and Chris Hinton of Northwestern at the tackles and North Carolina's Dave Drechsler and Ohio State's Joe Lukens at the guards. Wayne Radloff of Georgia is the center.

On defense, Charles Benson of Baylor and Walker Lee Ashley of Penn State are the ends and Gabriel Rivera of Texas Tech is the middle guard. Mark Bortz of Iowa and Mike Charles of Syracuse are the second-team tackles, with Wilber Marshall of Florida, Scott Radecic of Penn State and Al Richardson of Louisiana State at the linebacking spots.

Keith Bostic of Michigan, Jeremiah Castille of Alabama and Mark Robinson of Penn State are the defensive backs, with Paul Woodside of West Virginia the kicker and Reggie Roby of Iowa the punter.

Rutgers defeats Oregon

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. (UPI) — Kevin Black scored 18 points and center Roy Hinson intimidated Oregon underneath Monday night to lead Rutgers to a 53-42 victory over the Ducks.

Trailing 23-22 with 13:22 to play, Rutgers went on a 15-2 tear to break open the game. Black had 6 points and center Roy Hinson collected 5 of his 10 points during the stretch to help the Scarlet Knights run their record to 4-0. Hinson had 10 rebounds and 10 blocked shots.

Twelve turnovers and poor shooting by both teams left Rutgers with an 18-17 lead at the half. Blair Rasmussen led Oregon, 2-2, with 14 points and Paul Bain added 13.

Defending champion wins opener

RICHMOND, Va. (UPI) — Unseeded defending champion Mary Lou Piatek Monday defeated Barbra Bramblet 6-2, 6-1 in the opening-round action of an international tennis tournament.

In other afternoon first-round action, Trey Lewis defeated Jenny Klitch 3-6 6-3 6-2, and Kathleen Horvath defeated Shelly Solomon 6-3, 1-6, 6-4. In an evening match, Pam Casale beat Lisa Bonder 7-6, 6-3.

Piatek handled Bramblet easily by sticking with her baseline game. In the first set, Bramblet got to within 3-2 before Piatek won three straight.

Both Lewis and Klitch had held serve through the first five games before Lewis broke Klitch's serve to go up 4-2.

In the seventh game of the third set, Lewis lost a 40-0 lead but came back to win and make the score 5-2. Lewis then broke Klitch's serve in the next game to win the match.

Horvath took the first set after breaking her serve in the fourth game in the first set. In the second set, Solomon stopped making unforced errors and won easily.

In the final set, Solomon was leading 4-3 when Horvath broke Solomon's serve with a backhand winner to tie the match 4-4. She then held her serve and broke Solomon's serve in the next game to win it.

In the first of the scheduled night matches, Pam Casale beat Lisa Bonder 7-6 6-3.

Jerome's Young wins NFR bareback riding

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla. — Magic Valley cowboys continued to excel Monday during the third go-round of the National Finals Rodeo.

Jerome's Mickey Young won the bareback riding in the third go-round with a 78 score. Sunday, Young had scored 72 after notching 71 the first day, Saturday.

Declo's Kent Cooper, who won the saddle bronc competition in the second go-round, took fourth Monday with a 71. Buddy Reynolds of Slaton, Tex., won the event with a 77.

Another Idaho cowboy, Caldwell's Dee Pickett, kept improving. Sunday Pickett took eighth in calf roping and 10th in team roping with Mike Beers of Rufus, Ore. Pickett followed up those efforts Monday by placing second in calf roping, clocking a 10.6. Only Jimmie Cooper of Monument, N.M., did better than Pickett Monday, turning in a 10.0 time.

Pickett and Beers also bettered their team roping showing, tying for third Monday with a 6.1. The teams of Scott Laramore-Bobby Harris and Dick-J.D. Yates tied for first place with identical 5.8s.

Homedale's Lisa Davis was another Idaho placer, capturing 10th in the barrel racing with a 16.71. Donna Krenning of Eaton, Colo., won Monday's event with a 16.35.

In other events, Byron Walker of Ennis, Tex., took steer wrestling with a mercurial 5.5, and Denny Flynn won the bull riding with 87.

Top five remain unchanged in UPI college football poll

NEW YORK (UPI) — With No. 1 Georgia leading the way, the top five college football teams held their positions Monday following the final regular-season balloting by UPI's Board of Coaches.

In the only move within the Top 10, Texas, a 33-7 winner over Arkansas last weekend, jumped three spots to No. 7 while the Razorbacks slipped to No. 12.

The national champion will be announced Sunday, Jan. 2 at 4:30 p.m. MST when UPI releases its final ratings for the 1982 season.

In other games Saturday, Florida upset Florida State 13-10 to send the Seminoles from No. 14 to No. 20 while the Gators, 8-3, rejoined the Top 20 at No. 19. Nebraska, which fell behind 13-0 to Hawaii, rallied for 37-16 triumph to remain No. 3.

Sugar-Bowl bound Georgia, 11-0 and the only unbeaten and untied major college team, received 34 first-place votes and 593 points from Board, while Penn State, 10-1 and shooting for its first national title when the Nittany Lions meet Georgia on New Year's Night in New Orleans, collected three first-place votes and 549 points.

Nebraska had the remaining three first-place votes and amassed 529 points. Forty of the 42 coaches on the UPI Board voted in final regular-season balloting.

Cotton Bowl-bound Southern Methodist, 10-0-1, remained fourth, followed by Rose Bowl-bound UCLA, No. 6 Pittsburgh, Texas, No. 8 Washington, No. 9 West Virginia and No. 10 Oklahoma.

Last week, West Virginia was ranked eighth and Washington ninth.

Arizona State led off the second 10, up two spots from last week, followed by No. 12 Arkansas, No. 13 Louisiana State, No. 14 Maryland and No. 15 Auburn.

Ohio State is 16th, followed by No. 17 Michigan, No. 18 Tulsa, No. 19 Florida and No. 20 Florida State.

Boston College and Brigham Young, tied for 20th last week, dropped out of the ratings.

Georgia, which grabbed the No. 1 spot from Pittsburgh, on Nov. 8, can wrap up its second national championship in the last three years with a victory over Penn State in the Sugar Bowl on New Year's Day.

BC's Flutie leads All-New England squad

BOSTON (UPI) — Doug Flutie, Boston College's magnetic young quarterback who became the most productive single season passer in New England history, copped Player of the Year honors to head the 1982 UPI All-New England team in balloting by the region's coaches.

Flutie, whose passing and running led the Eagles to an 8-2-1 record and a Tangerine Bowl berth, was the overwhelming choice as first-team quarterback and Player of the Year.

The 5-foot-10 sophomore from Natick, Mass., completed 162 of 347 passes for a New England record 2,739 yards. Included was a 520-yard passing performance against Penn State, the best this year in the nation, 10th best in NCAA history and best ever against Penn State.

"Doug Flutie is something special," said Boston College Coach Jack Bicknell, also an overwhelming selection as Coach of the Year. "He has that certain magic and you can never count him out."

Flutie already is the No. 2 career passer in Boston College history and set three school passing records in 1982.

Joining Flutie in the backfield is New England's alltime rushing leader, Garry Pearson of Massachusetts; Andy Clivio of Holy Cross and Paul Lewis of Boston University. Pearson set New England marks for single season (1,631) and career rushing yards (3,859) and is the only player in New England history to win three NCAA statistical titles. He also holds eight school records.

Clivio spearheaded Holy Cross' resurgence by becoming the first runner in Crusader history to amass 1,000 yards in a season. Lewis, the sophomore who took over as BU's tailback when Gregg Drew was injured, responded by breaking Drew's single season rushing mark with 1,316 yards.

Jon Schoen, on the receiving end of many of Flutie's aerials, was the coaches' pick at wide receiver. Schoen, a senior, hauled in 29 passes for 605 yards and four touchdowns, including an 80-yarder against Holy Cross.

Another Boston College strongman, Scott Nizolek, was the choice at tight end by a large margin. Nizolek caught 39 passes for 658 yards and three TDs, including 11 against Penn State for 229 yards. He also had a 42.5 punting average.

Ken Kaplan of New Hampshire and Harvard captain Greg Brown were voted the top offensive tackles. Kaplan was a first-team selection two years ago.

Army fires head coach Cavanaugh

WEST POINT, N.Y. (UPI) — Ed Cavanaugh, who failed to produce a winning season in three years at the Cadet helm, was fired Monday as head football coach at Army.

Cavanaugh succeeded Lou Saban after the 1979 season and registered a 10-21-2 record, punctuated by Army's 24-7 loss to Navy last Saturday in its final game of the season.

"Cavanaugh has worked very hard to improve the program," said Carl Ulrich, director of athletics at West Point, "and we are grateful for his efforts. Though some progress has been made, we feel that it's time to make a change."

The Cadets posted identical 3-7-1 records during the 1980 and '81 seasons. This year, they finished with a 4-7 mark.

Ulrich said a search for a successor would begin immediately and said he hoped a new coach would be named before the end of December.

After Saturday's defeat in the 83rd renewal of the classic rivalry, Cavanaugh sensed the inevitable.

"I like to eat, but I'm realistic also," he said. "I'm very understanding about the situation and I know that coaching is judged by wins and losses."

Army's last winning season was 1977 when the Cadets fashioned a 7-4 log.

At a National Football Foundation and Hall of Fame lunch in New York City Monday, Brig. General Bill Carpenter, Army's famed "lonely end" of the late 1950's, said the Point's failure to recruit all-star high school and prep school talent contributes to the Academy's football failures.

Controversy settled at Pittsburgh

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — University of Pittsburgh football stars Ron Sams and Tim Lewis publicly made peace Monday with teammate Julius Dawkins, whom they criticized in two controversial articles published simultaneously Sunday in the Pittsburgh Press and the Dallas Times-Herald.

In the articles, both Sams, a guard, and Lewis, a safety, were quoted as criticizing Dawkins, a highly regarded wide receiver, for failing to play up to his capabilities.

Lewis also rapped the entire team for a general lack of intensity and discipline in trying to explain the Panthers' personally disappointing and frustrating losses this season to Notre Dame and Penn State.

At a news conference at Pitt Stadium Monday, the three players appeared together to state there were no hard feelings among them, no dissension on the team and no unhappiness with the coaching and leadership of first-year mentor Foge Fazio.

For more information, contact Clarence Phillips or Carl Snow at 733-2155. Phillips is also available at 733-1701.

Big Sky lauds Vandals' Smith

BOISE (UPI) — Center Kelvin Smith wasn't much of a factor in Idaho's win over Washington, but he so dominated the play against Washington State that the Big Sky Conference picked the senior Monday as its basketball player of the week.

Smith had only four points and seven rebounds, plus a blocked shot and a steal, in Idaho's 51-46 win over Pac-10 member Washington on Dec. 1.

But on Dec. 4, the short, 6-foot-6 center scored a career-high 22 points, grabbed 15 rebounds, blocked three shots and had three steals in the Vandals' 62-58 overtime win against Washington State.

Sporting News tabs Yount

HONOLULU (UPI) — Shortstop Robin Yount of the Milwaukee Brewers Monday was named Major League Player of the Year by The Sporting News.

Yount dominated the American League during the regular season both at the plate and in the field. He led the league in hits (210), doubles (46), total bases (367) and slugging percentage (.578). He also was second in batting average (.331), runs scored (129), third in triples (12) and fourth in RBI (114).

Brewers' Dalton top executive

HONOLULU (UPI) — Harry Dalton, general manager of the Milwaukee Brewers, has been named Major League Executive of the Year by the Sporting News, it was announced Monday at the baseball meetings.

Dalton received 11 votes to beat out Whitey Herzog of St. Louis for the prestigious honor. Herzog received seven votes.

Others receiving three or more votes were Joe McDonald of St. Louis, who shared the general manager duties with Herzog; John Mullen of Atlanta; Tom Haller of San Francisco and Jack McKeon of San Diego.

Kuhn remains civil to critics in speech

HONOLULU (UPI) — Bowie Kuhn, making his final state-of-the-union address as baseball commissioner, refused to condemn his critics Monday and instead outlined "articles of faith" for ensuring the game's future growth.

Kuhn, attending his last winter meetings as commissioner after 14 years, never once spoke bitterly of the men who had forced him out of office but instead spoke affectionately about the game and the people who run it.

About the only thing negative in his speech was his report on baseball's financial condition. He pointed out that despite record-setting attendance figures in the major leagues during 1982, early reports indicate that clubs will have lost a total of $25 million by the time final figures have been obtained.

The commissioner did not dwell very much on the negative, however. Instead, he outlined certain articles of faith that he felt would help baseball to prosper in the future.

He pointed to protecting the integrity of the game, maintaining the game as a form of family entertainment, limiting rule changes, establishing better relations between owners and players and striving for high quality of ownership as essential for baseball's growth and development.

"If we are going to solve our problems and achieve the growth of which the game is surely capable, then we must recognize that there are certain commandments, certain articles of faith which should be viewed as imperatives in baseball," said Kuhn.

"Certainly the first imperative is profecting the integrity of our game. Unless we have integrity, we have nothing. I am not naive enough to think that integrity is ever perfectly achieved but the effort to do so must be unrelenting, must be steadfast and unafraid.

"For example, we must be adamant that gambling influences will be barricaded outside the game; that legalized gambling on team sports will be fought with all our might and that the pernicious influence of illegal drugs will be battled at all times and at all levels of our game.

"If maintaining baseball's integrity should be a first article of faith, then maintaining baseball as a family game is an imperative of nearly as great importance. The ball park must be preserved as a decent place for parents to take their children and ticket prices should be at a clearly competitive level so that families can afford to come.

"It should be an article of faith that the relationship between clubs and players be improved, whatever the unhappy passions of the past may have been. We must resolve that the future will be characterized by a far-ranging effort — a really far-ranging effort by all parties — to achieve a decent level of harmony."

Stargell shifts from slugger to narrator

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (UPI) — Retired baseball great Willie Stargell is tuning up for another road trip, but instead of striding to the plate, he'll be stepping on stage — and the only score will be of the musical variety.

Stargell's latest endeavor will be as a narrator, with an orchestra, in a new work to be performed by the Eastman Philharmonia of Rochester's prestigious Eastman School of Music.

Stargell, who ended a standout, 20-year baseball career with the Pittsburgh Pirates this year, will narrate from selected texts of speeches by Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., accompanied by the orchestra.

The composition is a new work by Pulitzer Prize winner Joseph Schwantner, currently resident composer with the St. Louis Symphony.

"I consider this a tremendous honor for me," Stargell said Monday, adding he was a great admirer of King.

"I never had the pleasure of shaking hands with Dr. King but it would have been an honor," he said. "I think what he's done for mankind . . . for blacks like myself, created an awful lot of dignity and brought a sense of pride into the community.

"This is an all-new endeavor for me," he said, adding, "I know what it feels like to be a rookie again at 41.

"It represents the kind of thing you want to do, and look forward to doing."

Conductor David Effron said the initial rehearsal was a "tremendous success," adding he was in awe of how smoothly Stargell made the transition from delivering long home runs to interpreting a dramatic reading.

Clubs hold draft of minor leaguers

HONOLULU (UPI) — Pitchers were the prime target Monday in the annual major league draft, but it was a catcher — Dan Bilardello, who was the first player selected.

The Cincinnati Reds opened the winter meetings draft by selecting Bilardello from the Los Angeles Dodgers' organization.

Bilardello, 23, hit .285 with 17 home runs and 48 runs batted in for San Antonio of the Texas League last season.

Minnesota followed and took left-handed pitcher Paul Gibson from the Detroit Tigers organization. Last season with Birmingham, he had a 3-3 record with 12 saves.

The Texas Rangers chose pitcher Odell Jones. He was 16-9 with Portland in 1982.

The Oakland A's went counter to the trend and took a pair of shortstops. In the first round, the A's took Luis Quinones, a switch-hitter, from Hawaii. In the next go-around, they chose German Rivera from Albuquerque. Rivera hit .289 at San Antonio in 1982.

The Toronto Blue Jays were the only other team to make two selections. They took right-hander Jim Acker from Richmond and southpaw Mercedes Esquer from Hawaii.

In other first-round selections, Kansas City picked outfielder Joe Simpson, who saw major league duty with Los Angeles and Cincinnati, from Salt Lake, and St. Louis took right-handed pitcher Curt Kepshire from Indianapolis.
